McGrath Says Caudle Firing Truman's Idea

Holds "No Brief" For Former Aide

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—Attorney General McGrath disclosed today that President Truman acted on his own in firing T. Lamar Caudle, and that the President had never given him detailed reasons for the action.

Caudle, a key figure in the tax probe being conducted by a House Ways and Means subcommittee, was assistant attorney general in charge of tax fraud prosecutions for the Justice Department. He was ousted Nov. 16 by President Truman for "outside activities."

The attorney general told the subcommittee he held "no brief" for Caudle in the light of "indiscretions" brought out in the tax hearing, but at the same time he did not "presume to pass judgement on him."

"I like Mr. Caudle as a man—I still like him," McGrath said. "He has a great heart."

Prosecutor To Be Replaced

Before he left the hearing room, McGrath informed the committee that he is assigning a special assistant attorney general to take over all tax cases in the San Francisco area.

He did not name the special assistant, but said he would supplant U. S. District Attorney Chauncey Tramutolo in the tax prosecutions. A special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is now making an investigation of the San Francisco Internal Revenue Bureau, McGrath added.

Several weeks ago the House committee complained that Tramutolo had refused to cooperate with its investigator. The district attorney explained that he could not open his files to Congress without authority from the attorney general.

James G. Smyth was fired as San Francisco collector of internal revenue recently, and several of his lieutenants went out with him, all charged with irregularities. Smyth and two other men were indicted today on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government.

Policy To Be Discontinued

In another development today, Revenue Commissioner John B. Dunlap announced that the bureau is discontinuing its policy of allowing persons in serious ill health to escape prosecution for tax violations.

This policy was one of the reasons the congressmen decided to investigate the whole field of tax fraud prosecutions. Rep. King (D-Calif), chairman of the House committee, said that some grounds for failing to prosecute tax frauds "appear to be of doubtful validity" and "appear to lend themselves to easy abuse." He cited the medical policy as an example.

Dunlap stated today that he believed it was sound policy not to prosecute if there was medical evidence that such action would endanger a taxpayer's life, but that he had concluded the Bureau of Internal Revenue "is not a proper agency to take part in carrying it out."

Truman Float Plans Scuttled

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 11 (AP)—The White House frowned severely and the Tournament of Roses Association said an emphatic "no".

Such was the official reaction today to a proposed float depicting President Truman playing a piano against a background of mink coats and deep freezes.

It was the idea of the neighboring Temple City Junior Chamber of Commerce, which usually enters a humorous float in the New Year's Day parade.

In Washington Presidential Secretary Joseph Short today made public a telegram from Charles Morse, president of the junior chamber, asking if the President would object to such a float.

Short said he wrote this answer to Morse:

"In reply to your telegram of December seventh, it is suggested that most people viewing a float such as proposed in your wire would consider it in very bad taste."

Morse, in Temple City, said that since his wire was sent the Tournament of Roses Association has turned down the float idea, and his organization is thinking up another one.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Union members have ratified a new one-year contract giving 15,000 workers of the American Viscose Corporation an increase valued at nine and one-half cents an hour, it was announced today

Over 900 Planes Lost By American Forces In Korea

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—American forces have lost more than 900 planes in the Korean war.

This figure, which includes some non-combat losses, compares with a claimed destruction of about 300 Communist planes in actual air or ground action.

Air Force and Navy officials said today they do not view this as disproportionate for several reasons including:

(A) American planes have been in continuous action since the start of the war in June, 1950, while Red planes have appeared in significant numbers only during last eight or nine months; (b) much of the operation of American planes has been low level attack to support ground troops where the planes encountered ground fire, while the Communists have used no similar aerial support of their troops.

Army Checking Auto Producers' Sales Practices

Possible Collusion On Bidding Indicated

DETROIT, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Army has been investigating for possible collusion between automotive producers and their suppliers on defense contract bidding, one of its top lawyers disclosed today.

William L. Cary, Army deputy counselor, said "no such evidence" which would provide the basis for anti-trust action had been uncovered.

But he told a congressional subcommittee he had turned over results of the investigation to the Federal Trade Commission, which looks into allegations of restraint of trade.

The subcommittee, representing the House Committee on Executive Expenditures, came back to Detroit for a second look into activities of the Army's huge ordnance tank-automotive center — a combination procurement-tank producing enterprise. The center's former commander, Brig. Gen. David J. Crawford, was removed and transferred after disclosures by the committee last summer that he had accepted favors from defense contractors.

Questions concerning collusion reports followed testimony that the Army had paid more than double for some items by buying replacement parts from assemblers of military vehicles instead of from subcontractors who actually manufactured them.

It also was brought out that sometimes when such sub-contractors were asked to submit bids for replacement parts, their prices were as high as or higher than those of the assembler.

Rep. Porter Hardy (D-Va), chairman of the group, remarked to Cary:

"Then what you found was a reprehensible practice but no legal means to cope with it."

No company names were mentioned in connection with this line of questioning. Virtually all the major auto producers had been mentioned in earlier testimony, however.

Stork Interrupts Yuletide Shopping

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP) — A Queens woman interrupted her Christmas shopping today to have a baby in Macy's basement.

The child, a five-pound girl, was born prematurely in a lounge in the "downstairs store" of the world's largest department store, with a Macy doctor and a crowd of excited salesgirls standing by.

The mother, Mrs. Mary Hertrich, 31, had been shopping with her son, John, 4, and her aunt, Mrs. Mamie Gurk, when the stork interrupted.

Allies Admit Air Attack On Kaesong Area

Prisoner Issue Hits Quick Snag

MUNSAN, Korea, Wednesday, Dec. 12 (AP)—The United Nations command today made a "give and take" proposal to the Communists in an effort to reach a speedy armistice in Korea.

Allied negotiators said they would accept Red demands for behind-the-lines inspection by neutral nations and two other Communist proposals if:

1. The Reds would agree to troop rotation and arms replenishment;

2. The Reds would place neutral observers under control of a joint Allied-Red armistice commission.

MUNSAN, Korea, Wednesday, Dec. 12 (AP)—Overall prospects of reaching a Korean armistice agreement brightened somewhat Tuesday but Communist and Allied delegates were far apart on methods of exchanging prisoners and policing the truce.

Despite obstacles, observers agreed there was some progress. The Communists seemed in a bargaining mood and the United Nations command did not appear ready to reject flatly Red proposals for truce supervision.

The U. N. command today admitted one of its planes strafed and bombed the neutral Kaesong area yesterday morning.

The admission was made in a note given to Communist liaison officers this morning by Col. Andrew J. Kinney.

The note said: "The results of the investigation of the aerial attack at Yonung in the Kaesong area in the early morning of 11 December indicates that it was made by an aircraft of the United Nations command."

Kaesong is headquarters of the Communist truce delegation.

In Washington President Truman and his top military and political advisers were reported to have agreed on the next moves to be made in the Korean truce negotiations. New instructions, it appeared, were going out to Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, U. N. commander in the Far East. Some officials were moderately hopeful that armistice negotiations would be successful on all outstanding issues, possibly during the Christmas season.)

The prisoner issue hit a quick snag Tuesday. The Communists wanted a blanket exchange of all war prisoners after the armistice agreement is signed.

The United Nations held out for a regulated exchange at the time of an armistice on a "fair and equitable" basis—presumably man-for-man.

Sabres Win Sky Battle

SEOUL, Wednesday, Dec. 12 (AP)—Sixty-two U. S. Sabre jets tackled 115 MIGs Tuesday and when the last shot was fired in the cold Korean skies two Red jets had been probably destroyed and two damaged.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force, assessing results from two air battles over Northwest Korea, said all the Sabres returned safely.

Aground, the twilight war ended its second full week Tuesday night after one of the most quiet days of the entire Korean war. Only two small actions were reported along the whole 145-mile front.

Jury Indicts Ousted Calif. Tax Collector

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11 (AP)—The federal grand jury today indicted James Smyth, discharged collector of internal revenue for Northern California, as the latest move in the tax bureau scandals.

Smyth and two other discharged bureau men were charged with conspiracy to defraud the government.

The others were Paul V. Doyle, fired chief office deputy, and John K. Boland, chief field deputy, both attached to the Northern California bureau.

The grand jury returned four indictments in all.

In three other indictments, the grand jury named Doyle and Lloyd J. Cosgrove, charging them with falsification of tax documents.

The grand jury indictments followed a six-months investigation.

During that time, Smyth and 10 aides were fired for incompetence. Since then, one has pleaded guilty to embezzling $21,000 in tax money and has been sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Rioting Engulfs Iran Parliament; Premier Jeered

Soldiers Break Up Battle Of Deputies

TEHRAN, Iran, Dec. 11 (AP) — Opposition and government deputies fought with their fists and feet inside parliament today while a frenzied mob outside shouted for the blood of the opponents of Premier Mohammed Mossadegh.

Jeering, shouting and table-smashing by the opposition delayed a scheduled speech by Mossadegh and he threatened to deliver the speech to the crowd outside.

"Go on outside and talk to your stabbers," shouted Opposition Leader Jamal Imami.

"I will go," Mossadegh responded.

"To hell," roared Imami.

Premier Lashes Britain

When Mossadegh finally got the floor, he charged the British were trying to force Iran to her knees and hinted that George C. McGhee had been "removed" from his post as assistant secretary of state in Washington and named ambassador to Turkey because he was sympathetic to Iran.

Mossadegh's right-hand-man, Hossein Maki, told the Majlis he "smelled gunpowder" and urged it to hold a closed session tomorrow to end a sitdown in the building by 15 opposition deputies and 15 others before it brings real trouble.

Opposition deputies, making up with noise and tumult for what they seemingly lacked in votes in the 136-member Majlis (lower house), present a determined bid to force the downfall of the aging premier, whom they accused of setting up a "reign of terror" and leading the country toward ruin and red domination.

Soldiers Break Up Fight

After soldiers had broken up the fight and the parliamentary session began, the opposition deputies slammed desk tops, jeered and booed Mossadegh at the top of their voices. Their shouts for him to "resign!" came with such vehemence that he was forced to yield the floor for a time.

He finally made a rambling two and a half hour speech in which he vowed he would remain in power until the Majlis voted him out.

Thirty men of the opposition—deputies, newspaper editors and actors—have camped in the parliament building since Sunday, saying they were seeking sanctuary from "government gangsters." They have declared they will stay until Mossadegh resigns.

M'Kinney Asks Drastic Action By President

Angry "Over Being Sold Down River"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—Chairman Frank E. McKinney of the Democratic National Committee predicted today that President Truman, angry over scandals that have rocked his administration, will take drastic action to clean house "without delay."

Emerging from a half-hour conference with Mr. Truman at the White House, McKinney told newsmen:

"The President is very aware of the situation and he is highly concerned. He is angry over being sold down the river by some disloyal employes of the government."

The Democratic Party chieftain, himself under fire for a get-rich-quick stock deal in which he netted $68,000 profit on a $1,000 investment, said he advised Mr. Truman it was urgent that drastic steps be taken at once.

He said he recommended that the President launch an independent investigation—possibly by a non-partisan commission—of the scandals that have blown up around the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Justice Department in recent weeks.

Stock Deal Not Questioned

Asked if Mr. Truman had raised any question about his 68-to-1 stock profits, McKinney replied in the negative.

He also declared that Mr. Truman had not discussed the possibility of any "cabinet changes." Some Congress members have demanded the resignations of Attorney General McGrath, who heads the Justice Department, and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, overall boss of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

McKinney emphasized that Mr. Truman is gravely perturbed by the evidence of corruption and irregularities brought to light by a House investigating committee, and he told reporters:

"I'm inclined to think there will be action soon."

McKinney told newsmen he and Mr. Truman talked "at quite some length" about the scandals in government. He said he personally feels that those responsible for the scandals are "guilty of the highest degree of disloyalty."

Announcement Expected

McKinney said he told Mr. Truman that he could not overemphasize the importance of taking "drastic action in the immediate future—without delay."

He indicated that Mr. Truman agreed with him and suggested that a White House announcement may be forthcoming soon.

McKinney said the important thing is to "get to the bottom" of the situation as quickly as possible, in advance of the 1952 election campaigns.

"Everything depends on the speed and dispatch with which the administration acts," he said.

"As the situation has been handled by Democrats, cleaned up by Democrats, and Democrats have acted to remove the guilty as fast as they have been discovered, I am of the opinion that this will not be an issue of the 1952 campaign."

Pleven Is Given Confidence Vote

PARIS, Dec. 11 (AP)—The French National Assembly today gave Premier Rene Pleven a vote of confidence, 376 to 240, on his refusal to have other issues tied to consideration of the Schuman plan treaty to pool West Europe's coal and steel.

Socialists, Radical Socialists and smaller groups allied with them joined the Popular Republican Movement of Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, the author of the plan, to give Pleven a majority unusually large by assembly standards.

Communists and the followers of Gen. Charles De Gaulle made up the bulk of the opposition.

Just before the assembly adjourned, Plevin announced he would make final ratification of the Schuman plan a vote of confidence also.

This means that a final parliamentary vote on the plan will be delayed again—this time until the Thursday session. The French constitution requires that a major vote of confidence not be held until 48 hours after it has been announced.

Pleven had staked the fate of his cabinet against a motion by a rightist deputy, Paul Andre, that would have sent a proposed treaty on the plan back to a committee for further study.

Spokesman Says Egypt To Recall Envoy To Britain

Nature Of Cabinet Decision Withheld

CAIRO, Dec. 12 (Wednesday) (INS) — A government spokesman said today Egypt has decided to recall its ambassador to Britain and permit the free arming of its people for a threatened showdown in the Suez Canal crisis.

According to the spokesman, the government will also enact new legislation for punishment of Egyptians found guilty of collaborating with British forces in the canal zone.

The eight-week Anglo-Egyptian struggle for control of canal zone bases since Cairo abrogated theaties with London has taken a toll of close to 600 in dead and wounded in clashes that have transformed the country into a dangerous powder keg.

Cabinet Meeting Held

The spokesman said the Egyptian embassy will be left in the care of a charge d'affaires after the ambassador, Abdel Fattah Amr Pasha, returns home. Egypt already has recalled several military training missions from Britain.

The Egyptian decision on future relations with Britain was made at a special cabinet meeting last night as the country stood on the crossroads of its explosive bases dispute with Prime Minister Churchill's government.

Decision Is Withheld

Right after the cabinet meeting broke up, it was announced some kind of decision was made on the question of whether Egypt would rupture relations with London.

But the exact nature of the decision was withheld. At first it was stated the decision would be made public Tuesday. The chief press officer in the premier's office, Ahmed Shafei, said later he had been instructed to postpone release of the announcement — "a short one"—until Wednesday.

Files For Congress

"Starlight-Double Delight Cake" Wins Prize Of $25,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Mrs. S. P. Weston, 39, La Jolla, Calif., today was named winner of the $25,000 first prize in the nation-wide Pillsbury Mills baking and recipe contest.

Mrs. Weston, a mother of two, won with a chocolate dessert called "starlight-double delight cake," a creation the experts said is the newest thing in cake recipes in years.

Margaret Truman, announcing Mrs. Weston as the "cook-of-the-year," handed her the first prize check at a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Winner of the $5,000 in the teen-age group is 17-year-old Helen Thatcher, Charleston, S. C., who baked an apple orchard pie that has grated apples, sweetened and flavored, topped with whipped cream.

Indictments Of Calif. Reds "Defective"

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11 (AP)—U. S. Judge William C. Mathes gave written notice today that indictments against 15 persons accused as California Communist Party leaders will be dismissed on motion of their counsel.

Walter S. Binns, acting U. S. attorney who is prosecuting the case, said the 15 will be reindicted immediately by the grand jury to correct technical defects in the existing indictments. The court gave the government 10 days to correct what he termed "ambiguous and defective language" in the indictments.

The 15 defendants are charged with conspiracy to advocate the overthrow of the government by force. Eleven of them are at liberty on bail ranging from $5,000 to $10,000.

High Court Rules Against Paper

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Supreme Court ruled today that the Lorain, Ohio, Journal broke the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by refusing to sell space to advertisers who also wanted to use a rival radio station.

The vote was 7-0 to uphold a decision by U. S. District Judge Emerich B. Freed of Cleveland.

Judge Freed had ruled that the Journal, as the only daily newspaper in Lorain, had a "substantial monopoly" until radio station WEOL came along. Then, Judge Freed said, the paper tried to destroy the station by forcing advertisers to use the Journal exclusively.

Justice Burton, who delivered the Supreme Court's opinion, said:

"The Sherman Act is as appropriate x x x against newspapers as it is against others."

Big Four Report Lone Agreement On Arms Group

Still Poles Apart On Atomic Controls

PARIS, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Big Four powers announced today an agreement on a 12-nation disarmament commission, but Russia and the West remained poles apart on the fundamental issue of atomic controls after 10 days of secret talks.

Soon after the four-power report was made to the United Nations Political Committee, the United States, Britain and France called again for a one-package plan to curb the armed might of every country.

Such a system would put flying bombs, guided missiles, atomic artillery, atomic bombs and every other weapon of destruction under balanced controls aimed at promoting and preserving peace.

Lloyd Speaks For West

British Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd spoke for the West.

Lloyd rejected once more Russian proposals for an immediate ban on atomic weapons and the fixing of controls later. He said the Russians apparently want to separate atomic weapons from conventional armaments in any control scheme.

"Conventional armaments may be very terrible," Lloyd told the committee in summing up the Big Four talks. "Think of a great city under concentrated and continuous attack by, for example, V-1s, that is to say flying bombs, or by guided missiles or other so-called conventional armaments.

Two Problems "Inseparable"

"Are not the consequences of such devastation something we wish to avoid just as much as devastation caused by atomic attack? x x x It is impossible to separate the two problems and we wish to say that, concurrently with our attempt to deal with the atom bomb, so we must try to deal with these other weapons."

The proposed disarmament commission, expected to be set up by the present General Assembly, likely will deal early next year with all proposals for arms control, East and West.

Dixie Anti-Truman Move Gains Strength

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—A southern "revolt" against the possible re-election of President Truman picked up strength today with fresh support for Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga) as a potential Dixie candidate.

Russell himself, newly returned from Europe, told a news conference:

"I am not a candidate. I am under no illusions as to a southerner being president of the United States."

The Georgia senator, veteran quarterback of southern filibusters against President Truman's civil rights program, did not close the door however against the possibility that he might become the leader of anti-Truman forces at the Democratic nominating convention next July, as he was in 1948.

The new boost for Russell came from Sen. Stennis (D-Miss).

Franchot Tone Fined $400 For Spitting On Columnist

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Dec. 11 (AP)—For spitting in the face of a red-haired newspaperwoman, Franchot Tone was fined $400 today.

He also apologized in court—"I am very sorry for what happened"—and was put on probation for a year. A 45-day jail sentence was suspended.

Florabel Muir, who writes for the New York News and the Los Angeles Mirror, was not present to hear the apology.

Reversing a previous plea, the actor answered "guilty" in a soft voice to her charge of battery. Miss Muir told sheriff's officers that Tone spat on her right cheek in Ciro's night spot last Oct. 29.

Tone told the court:

"One of the charges in this complaint is true.

"But I did not kick or throttle the complaintant or use foul language."

He continued:

"My counsel has advised me that provocation can not be used as a defense.

"But the complaintant has admitted in print that she listened in on telephone conversations of the woman I was going to marry" (Barbara Payton).

"I must say publicly I am very sorry for what happened and try to apologize to the complaintant as best I can."

Tallulah Sweeps Angrily Out Of Her Ex-Maid's Trial

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Tallulah Bankhead today swept angrily out of a court trial in which a lawyer charged that her former maid-secretary paid for "marijuana cigarets, cocaine, booze and sex" for the actress.

"I was disgusted with the tactics of the defense attorney," Miss Bankhead said after the lawyer had asked the court to make her "keep her mouth shut."

She returned after about 20 minutes.

More than 100 would-be spectators were turned away as the grand larceny and forgery trial of Mrs. Evyleen R. Cronin, 59, Miss Bankhead's ex-personal secretary, opened before a packed court room.

She is named in 32 counts for allegedly raising the sums of Miss Bankhead's checks.

The actress' tempestuous departure came after Defense Attorney Fred G. Morritt had twice complained of her "sounds and facial expressions.

"She is making remarks and sounds that might be all right on a radio program," Morritt said, "but I ask the court that you order her to keep her mouth shut."

General Sessions Court Judge Harold E. Stevens said he had seen nothing disturbing about Miss Bankhead's conduct, except for a fit of coughing during the morning session, and refused to reprimand her.

Weather Forecast

The prisoner issue hit a quick snag Tuesday. The Communists wanted a blanket exchange of all war prisoners after the armistice agreement is signed.

The United Nations held out for a regulated exchange at the time of an armistice on a "fair and equitable" basis—presumably man-for-man.

Sabres Win Sky Battle

SEOUL, Wednesday, Dec. 12 (AP)—Sixty-two U. S. Sabre jets tackled 115 MIGs Tuesday and when the last shot was fired in the cold Korean skies two Red jets had been probably destroyed and two damaged.

The U. S. Fifth Air Force, assessing results from two air battles over Northwest Korea, said all the Sabres returned safely.

Aground, the twilight war ended its second full week Tuesday night after one of the most quiet days of the entire Korean war. Only two small actions were reported along the whole 145-mile front.

Jury Indicts Ousted Calif. Tax Collector

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11 (AP)—The federal grand jury today indicted James Smyth, discharged collector of internal revenue for Northern California, as the latest move in the tax bureau scandals.

Smyth and two other discharged bureau men were charged with conspiracy to defraud the government.

The others were Paul V. Doyle, fired chief office deputy, and John K. Boland, chief field deputy, both attached to the Northern California bureau.

The grand jury returned four indictments in all.

In three other indictments, the grand jury named Doyle and Lloyd J. Cosgrove, charging them with falsification of tax documents.

The grand jury indictments followed a six-months investigation.

During that time, Smyth and 10 aides were fired for incompetence. Since then, one has pleaded guilty to embezzling $21,000 in tax money and has been sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Rioting Engulfs Iran Parliament; Premier Jeered

Soldiers Break Up Battle Of Deputies

TEHRAN, Iran, Dec. 11 (AP) — Opposition and government deputies fought with their fists and feet inside parliament today while a frenzied mob outside shouted for the blood of the opponents of Premier Mohammed Mossadegh.

Jeering, shouting and table-smashing by the opposition delayed a scheduled speech by Mossadegh and he threatened to deliver the speech to the crowd outside.

"Go on outside and talk to your stabbers," shouted Opposition Leader Jamal Imami.

"I will go," Mossadegh responded.

"To hell," roared Imami.

Premier Lashes Britain

When Mossadegh finally got the floor, he charged the British were trying to force Iran to her knees and hinted that George C. McGhee had been "removed" from his post as assistant secretary of state in Washington and named ambassador to Turkey because he was sympathetic to Iran.

Mossadegh's right-hand-man, Hossein Maki, told the Majlis he "smelled gunpowder" and urged it to hold a closed session tomorrow to end a sitdown in the building by 15 opposition deputies and 15 others before it brings real trouble.

Opposition deputies, making up with noise and tumult for what they seemingly lacked in votes in the 136-member Majlis (lower house), present a determined bid to force the downfall of the aging premier, whom they accused of setting up a "reign of terror" and leading the country toward ruin and red domination.

Soldiers Break Up Fight

After soldiers had broken up the fight and the parliamentary session began, the opposition deputies slammed desk tops, jeered and booed Mossadegh at the top of their voices. Their shouts for him to "resign!" came with such vehemence that he was forced to yield the floor for a time.

He finally made a rambling two and a half hour speech in which he vowed he would remain in power until the Majlis voted him out.

Thirty men of the opposition—deputies, newspaper editors and actors—have camped in the parliament building since Sunday, saying they were seeking sanctuary from "government gangsters." They have declared they will stay until Mossadegh resigns.

M'Kinney Asks Drastic Action By President

Angry "Over Being Sold Down River"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—Chairman Frank E. McKinney of the Democratic National Committee predicted today that President Truman, angry over scandals that have rocked his administration, will take drastic action to clean house "without delay."

Emerging from a half-hour conference with Mr. Truman at the White House, McKinney told newsmen:

"The President is very aware of the situation and he is highly concerned. He is angry over being sold down the river by some disloyal employes of the government."

The Democratic Party chieftain, himself under fire for a get-rich-quick stock deal in which he netted $68,000 profit on a $1,000 investment, said he advised Mr. Truman it was urgent that drastic steps be taken at once.

He said he recommended that the President launch an independent investigation—possibly by a non-partisan commission—of the scandals that have blown up around the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Justice Department in recent weeks.

Stock Deal Not Questioned

Asked if Mr. Truman had raised any question about his 68-to-1 stock profits, McKinney replied in the negative.

He also declared that Mr. Truman had not discussed the possibility of any "cabinet changes." Some Congress members have demanded the resignations of Attorney General McGrath, who heads the Justice Department, and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, overall boss of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

McKinney emphasized that Mr. Truman is gravely perturbed by the evidence of corruption and irregularities brought to light by a House investigating committee, and he told reporters:

"I'm inclined to think there will be action soon."

McKinney told newsmen he and Mr. Truman talked "at quite some length" about the scandals in government. He said he personally feels that those responsible for the scandals are "guilty of the highest degree of disloyalty."

Announcement Expected

McKinney said he told Mr. Truman that he could not overemphasize the importance of taking "drastic action in the immediate future—without delay."

He indicated that Mr. Truman agreed with him and suggested that a White House announcement may be forthcoming soon.

McKinney said the important thing is to "get to the bottom" of the situation as quickly as possible, in advance of the 1952 election campaigns.

"Everything depends on the speed and dispatch with which the administration acts," he said.

"As the situation has been handled by Democrats, cleaned up by Democrats, and Democrats have acted to remove the guilty as fast as they have been discovered, I am of the opinion that this will not be an issue of the 1952 campaign."

Pleven Is Given Confidence Vote

PARIS, Dec. 11 (AP)—The French National Assembly today gave Premier Rene Pleven a vote of confidence, 376 to 240, on his refusal to have other issues tied to consideration of the Schuman plan treaty to pool West Europe's coal and steel.

Socialists, Radical Socialists and smaller groups allied with them joined the Popular Republican Movement of Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, the author of the plan, to give Pleven a majority unusually large by assembly standards.

Communists and the followers of Gen. Charles De Gaulle made up the bulk of the opposition.

Just before the assembly adjourned, Plevin announced he would make final ratification of the Schuman plan a vote of confidence also.

This means that a final parliamentary vote on the plan will be delayed again—this time until the Thursday session. The French constitution requires that a major vote of confidence not be held until 48 hours after it has been announced.

Pleven had staked the fate of his cabinet against a motion by a rightist deputy, Paul Andre, that would have sent a proposed treaty on the plan back to a committee for further study.

Spokesman Says Egypt To Recall Envoy To Britain

Nature Of Cabinet Decision Withheld

CAIRO, Dec. 12 (Wednesday) (INS) — A government spokesman said today Egypt has decided to recall its ambassador to Britain and permit the free arming of its people for a threatened showdown in the Suez Canal crisis.

According to the spokesman, the government will also enact new legislation for punishment of Egyptians found guilty of collaborating with British forces in the canal zone.

The eight-week Anglo-Egyptian struggle for control of canal zone bases since Cairo abrogated theaties with London has taken a toll of close to 600 in dead and wounded in clashes that have transformed the country into a dangerous powder keg.

Cabinet Meeting Held

The spokesman said the Egyptian embassy will be left in the care of a charge d'affaires after the ambassador, Abdel Fattah Amr Pasha, returns home. Egypt already has recalled several military training missions from Britain.

The Egyptian decision on future relations with Britain was made at a special cabinet meeting last night as the country stood on the crossroads of its explosive bases dispute with Prime Minister Churchill's government.

Decision Is Withheld

Right after the cabinet meeting broke up, it was announced some kind of decision was made on the question of whether Egypt would rupture relations with London.

But the exact nature of the decision was withheld. At first it was stated the decision would be made public Tuesday. The chief press officer in the premier's office, Ahmed Shafei, said later he had been instructed to postpone release of the announcement — "a short one"—until Wednesday.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 11 (AP) — Ned H. Ragland, Beckley, Raleigh County prosecutor, today filed a certificate of candidacy for representative to Congress from the Sixth Congressional District of West Virginia.

"Starlight-Double Delight Cake" Wins Prize Of $25,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Mrs. S. P. Weston, 39, La Jolla, Calif., today was named winner of the $25,000 first prize in the nation-wide Pillsbury Mills baking and recipe contest.

Mrs. Weston, a mother of two, won with a chocolate dessert called "starlight-double delight cake," a creation the experts said is the newest thing in cake recipes in years.

Margaret Truman, announcing Mrs. Weston as the "cook-of-the-year," handed her the first prize check at a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Winner of the $5,000 in the teenage group is 17-year-old Helen Thatcher, Charleston, S. C., who baked an apple orchard pie that has grated apples, sweetened and flavored, topped with whipped cream.

Indictments Of Calif. Reds "Defective"

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11 (AP)—U. S. Judge William C. Mathes gave written notice today that indictments against 15 persons accused as California Communist Party leaders will be dismissed on motion of their counsel.

Walter S. Binns, acting U. S. attorney who is prosecuting the case, said the 15 will be reindicted immediately by the grand jury to correct technical defects in the existing indictments. The court gave the government 10 days to correct what he termed "ambiguous and defective language" in the indictments.

The 15 defendants are charged with conspiracy to advocate the overthrow of the government by force. Eleven of them are at liberty on bail ranging from $5,000 to $10,000.

High Court Rules Against Paper

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Supreme Court ruled today that the Lorain, Ohio, Journal broke the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by refusing to sell space to advertisers who also wanted to use a rival radio station.

The vote was 7-0 to uphold a decision by U. S. District Judge Emerich B. Freed of Cleveland.

Judge Freed had ruled that the Journal, as the only daily newspaper in Lorain, had a "substantial monopoly" until radio station WEOL came along. Then, Judge Freed said, the paper tried to destroy the station by forcing advertisers to use the Journal exclusively.

Justice Burton, who delivered the Supreme Court's opinion, said:

Sasscer Posts Filing Fee

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—Rep. Sasscer (D-Md) made it official today. He mailed his filing fee of $260 as a Democratic candidate for the U. S. Senate in the 1952 election.

Big Four Report Lone Agreement On Arms Group

Still Poles Apart On Atomic Controls

PARIS, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Big Four powers announced today an agreement on a 12-nation disarmament commission, but Russia and the West remained poles apart on the fundamental issue of atomic controls after 10 days of secret talks.

Soon after the four-power report was made to the United Nations Political Committee, the United States, Britain and France called again for a one-package plan to curb the armed might of every country.

Such a system would put flying bombs, guided missiles, atomic artillery, atomic bombs and every other weapon of destruction under balanced controls aimed at promoting and preserving peace.

Lloyd Speaks For West

British Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd spoke for the West.

Lloyd rejected once more Russian proposals for an immediate ban on atomic weapons and the fixing of controls later. He said the Russians apparently want to separate atomic weapons from conventional armaments in any control scheme.

"Conventional armaments may be very terrible," Lloyd told the committee in summing up the Big Four talks. "Think of a great city under concentrated and continuous attack by, for example, V-1s, that is to say flying bombs, or by guided missiles or other so-called conventional armaments.

Two Problems "Inseparable"

"Are not the consequences of such devastation something we wish to avoid just as much as devastation caused by atomic attack? x x x It is impossible to separate the two problems and we wish to say that, concurrently with our attempt to deal with the atom bomb, so we must try to deal with these other weapons."

The proposed disarmament commission, expected to be set up by the present General Assembly, likely will deal early next year with all proposals for arms control, East and West.

Dixie Anti-Truman Move Gains Strength

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—A southern "revolt" against the possible re-election of President Truman picked up strength today with fresh support for Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga) as a potential Dixie candidate.

Russell himself, newly returned from Europe, told a news conference:

"I am not a candidate. I am under no illusions as to a southerner being president of the United States."

The Georgia senator, veteran quarterback of southern filibusters against President Truman's civil rights program, did not close the door however against the possibility that he might become the leader of anti-Truman forces at the Democratic nominating convention next July, as he was in 1948.

The new boost for Russell came from Sen. Stennis (D-Miss).

Franchot Tone Fined $400 For Spitting On Columnist

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Dec. 11 (AP)—For spitting in the face of a red-haired newspaperwoman, Franchot Tone was fined $400 today.

He also apologized in court—"I am very sorry for what happened"—and was put on probation for a year. A 45-day jail sentence was suspended.

Florabel Muir, who writes for the New York News and the Los Angeles Mirror, was not present to hear the apology.

Reversing a previous plea, the actor answered "guilty" in a soft voice to her charge of battery. Miss Muir told sheriff's officers that Tone spat on her right cheek in Ciro's night spot last Oct. 29.

Tone told the court:

"One of the charges in this complaint is true.

"But I did not kick or throttle the complaintant or use foul language."

He continued:

"My counsel has advised me that provocation can not be used as a defense.

"But the complaintant has admitted in print that she listened in on telephone conversations of the woman I was going to marry" (Barbara Payton).

"I must say publicly I am very sorry for what happened and try to apologize to the complaintant as best I can."

Tallulah Sweeps Angrily Out Of Her Ex-Maid's Trial

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Tallulah Bankhead today swept angrily out of a court trial in which a lawyer charged that her former maid-secretary paid for "marijuana cigarets, cocaine, booze and sex" for the actress.

"I was disgusted with the tactics of the defense attorney," Miss Bankhead said after the lawyer had asked the court to make her "keep her mouth shut."

She returned after about 20 minutes.

More than 100 would-be spectators were turned away as the grand larceny and forgery trial of Mrs. Evyleen R. Cronin, 59, Miss Bankhead's ex-personal secretary, opened before a packed court room.

She is named in 32 counts for allegedly raising the sums of Miss Bankhead's checks.

The actress' tempestuous departure came after Defense Attorney Fred G. Morritt had twice complained of her "sounds and facial expressions.

"She is making remarks and sounds that might be all right on a radio program," Morritt said, "but I ask the court that you order her to keep her mouth shut."

General Sessions Court Judge Harold E. Stevens said he had seen nothing disturbing about Miss Bankhead's conduct, except for a fit of coughing during the morning session, and refused to reprimand her.

Weather Forecast
Cloudy with snow flurries today; tomorrow partly cloudy and moderately cold.

TRUMAN SEEN "CLEANING HOUSE"

McGrath Says Caudle Firing Truman's Idea

Holds "No Brief" For Former Aide

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—Attorney General McGrath disclosed today that President Truman acted on his own in firing T. Lamar Caudle, and that the President had never given him detailed reasons for the action.

Caudle, a key figure in the tax probe being conducted by a House Ways and Means subcommittee, was assistant attorney general in charge of tax fraud prosecutions for the Justice Department. He was ousted Nov. 16 by President Truman for "outside activities."

The attorney general told the subcommittee he held "no brief" for Caudle in the light of "indiscretions" brought out in the tax hearing, but at the same time he did not "presume to pass judgement on him."

"I like Mr. Caudle as a man—I still like him," McGrath said. "He has a great heart."

Prosecutor To Be Replaced

Before he left the hearing room, McGrath informed the committee that he is assigning a special assistant attorney general to take over all tax cases in the San Francisco area.

He did not name the special assistant, but said he would supplant U. S. District Attorney Chauncey Tramutolo in the tax prosecutions. A special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is now making an investigation of the San Francisco Internal Revenue Bureau, McGrath added.

Several weeks ago the House committee complained that Tramutolo had refused to cooperate with its investigator. The district attorney explained that he could not open his files to Congress without authority from the attorney general.

James G. Smyth was fired as San Francisco collector of internal revenue recently, and several of his lieutenants went out with him, all charged with irregularities. Smyth and two other men were indicted today on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government.

Policy To Be Discontinued

In another development today, Revenue Commissioner John B. Dunlap announced that the bureau is discontinuing its policy of allowing persons in serious ill health to escape prosecution for tax violations.

This policy was one of the reasons the congressmen decided to investigate the whole field of tax fraud prosecutions. Rep. King (D-Calif), chairman of the House committee, said that some grounds for failing to prosecute tax frauds "appear to be of doubtful validity" and "appear to lend themselves to easy abuse." He cited the medical policy as an example.

Dunlap stated today that he believed it was sound policy not to prosecute if there was medical evidence that such action would endanger a taxpayer's life, but that he had concluded the Bureau of Internal Revenue "is not a proper agency to take part in carrying it out."

Truman Float Plans Scuttled

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 11 (AP)—The White House frowned severely and the Tournament of Roses Association said an emphatic "no".

Such was the official reaction today to a proposed float depicting President Truman playing a piano against a background of mink coats and deep freezes.

It was the idea of the neighboring Temple City Junior Chamber of Commerce, which usually enters a humorous float in the New Year's Day parade.

In Washington Presidential Secretary Joseph Short today made public a telegram from Charles Morse, president of the junior chamber, asking if the President would object to such a float.

Short said he wrote this answer to Morse:

"In reply to your telegram of December seventh, it is suggested that most people viewing a float such as proposed in your wire would consider it in very bad taste."

Morse, in Temple City, said that since his wire was sent the Tournament of Roses Association has turned down the float idea, and his organization is thinking up another one.

Viscose Pact Ratified

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Union members have ratified a new one-year contract giving 15,000 workers of the American Viscose Corporation an increase valued at nine and one-half cents an hour, it was announced today.

Over 900 Planes Lost By American Forces In Korea

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—American forces have lost more than 900 planes in the Korean war.

This figure, which includes some non-combat losses, compares with a claimed destruction of about 300 Communist planes in actual air or ground action.

Air Force and Navy officials said today they do not view this as disproportionate for several reasons including:

(A) American planes have been in continuous action since the start of the war in June, 1950, while Red planes have appeared in significant numbers only during last eight or nine months; (b) much of the operation of American planes has been low level attack to support ground troops where the planes encountered ground fire, while the Communists have used no similar aerial support of their troops.

Army Checking Auto Producers' Sales Practices

Possible Collusion On Bidding Indicated

DETROIT, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Army has been investigating for possible collusion between automotive producers and their suppliers on defense contract bidding, one of its top lawyers disclosed today.

William L. Cary, Army deputy counselor, said "no such evidence" which would provide the basis for anti-trust action had been uncovered.

But he told a congressional subcommittee he had turned over results of the investigation to the Federal Trade Commission, which looks into allegations of restraint of trade.

The subcommittee, representing the House Committee on Executive Expenditures, came back to Detroit for a second look into activities of the Army's huge ordnance tank-automotive center — a combination procurement-tank producing enterprise. The center's former commander, Brig. Gen. David J. Crawford, was removed and transferred after disclosures by the committee last summer that he had accepted favors from defense contractors.

Questions concerning collusion reports followed testimony that the Army had paid more than double for some items by buying replacement parts from assemblers of military vehicles instead of from subcontractors who actually manufactured them.

It also was brought out that sometimes when such sub-contractors were asked to submit bids for replacement parts, their prices were as high as or higher than those of the assembler.

Rep. Porter Hardy (D-Va), chairman of the group, remarked to Cary:

"Then what you found was a reprehensible practice but no legal means to cope with it."

No company names were mentioned in connection with this line of questioning. Virtually all the major auto producers had been mentioned in earlier testimony, however.

Stork Interrupts Yuletide Shopping

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP) — A Queens woman interrupted her Christmas shopping today to have a baby in Macy's basement.

The child, a five-pound girl, was born prematurely in a lounge in the "downstairs store" of the world's largest department store, with a Macy doctor and a crowd of excited salesgirls standing by.

The mother, Mrs. Mary Hertrich, 31, had been shopping with her son, John, 4, and her aunt, Mrs. Mamie Gurk, when the stork interrupted.

Allies Admit Air Attack On Kaesong Area

Prisoner Issue Hits Quick Snag

MUNSAN, Korea, Wednesday, Dec. 12 (AP)—The United Nations command today made a "give and take" proposal to the Communists in an effort to reach a speedy armistice in Korea.

Allied negotiators said they would accept Red demands for behind-the-lines inspection by neutral nations and two other Communist proposals if:

1. The Reds would agree to troop rotation and arms replenishment;

2. The Reds would place neutral observers under control of a joint Allied-Red armistice commission.

MUNSAN, Korea, Wednesday, Dec. 12 (AP)—Overall prospects of reaching a Korean armistice agreement brightened somewhat Tuesday but Communist and Allied delegates were far apart on methods of exchanging prisoners and policing the truce.

Despite obstacles, observers agreed there was some progress. The Communists seemed in a bargaining mood and the United Nations command did not appear ready to reject flatly Red proposals for truce supervision.

The U. N. command today admitted one of its planes strafed and bombed the neutral Kaesong area yesterday morning.

The admission was made in a note given to Communist liaison officers this morning by Col. Andrew J. Kinney.

The note said: "The results of the investigation of the aerial attack at Yonung in the Kaesong area in the early morning of 11 December indicates that it was made by an aircraft of the United Nations command."

Kaesong is headquarters of the Communist truce delegation.

In Washington President Truman and his top military and political advisers were reported to have agreed on the next moves to be made in the Korean truce negotiations. New instructions, it appeared, were going out to Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, U. N. commander in the Far East. Some officials were moderately hopeful that armistice negotiations would be successful on all outstanding issues, possibly during the Christmas season.)

The prisoner issue hit a quick snag Tuesday. The Communists wanted a blanket exchange of all war prisoners after the armistice agreement is signed.

The United Nations held out for a regulated exchange at the time of an armistice on a "fair and equitable" basis—presumably man-for-man.

Jury Indicts Ousted Calif. Tax Collector

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11 (AP)—The federal grand jury today indicted James Smyth, discharged collector of internal revenue for Northern California, as the latest move in the tax bureau scandals.

Smyth and two other discharged bureau men were charged with conspiracy to defraud the government.

The others were Paul V. Doyle, fired chief office deputy, and John K. Boland, chief field deputy, both attached to the Northern California bureau.

The grand jury returned four indictments in all.

In three other indictments, the grand jury named Doyle and Lloyd J. Cosgrove, charging them with falsification of tax documents.

The grand jury indictments followed a six-months investigation.

During that time, Smyth and 10 aides were fired for incompetence. Since then, one has pleaded guilty to embezzling $21,000 in tax money and has been sentenced to 10 years in prison.

"To hell," roared Imami.

Premier Lashes Britain

When Mossadegh finally got the floor, he charged the British were trying to force Iran to her knees and hinted that George C. McGhee had been "removed" from his post as assistant secretary of state in Washington and named ambassador to Turkey because he was sympathetic to Iran.

Mossadegh's right-hand-man, Hossein Maki, told the Majlis he "smelled gunpowder" and urged it to hold a closed session tomorrow to end a sitdown in the building by 15 opposition deputies and 15 others before it brings real trouble.

Opposition deputies, making up with noise and tumult for what they seemingly lacked in votes in the 136-member Majlis (lower house), present a determined bid to force the downfall of the aging premier, whom they accused of setting up a "reign of terror" and leading the country toward ruin and red domination.

Soldiers Break Up Fight

After soldiers had broken up the fight and the parliamentary session began, the opposition deputies slammed desk tops, jeered and booed Mossadegh at the top of their voices. Their shouts for him to "resign!" came with such vehemence that he was forced to yield the floor for a time.

He finally made a rambling two and a half hour speech in which he vowed he would remain in power until the Majlis voted him out.

Thirty men of the opposition—deputies, newspaper editors and actors—have camped in the parliament building since Sunday, saying they were seeking sanctuary from "government gangsters." They have declared they will stay until Mossadegh resigns.

M'Kinney Asks Drastic Action By President

Angry "Over Being Sold Down River"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—Chairman Frank E. McKinney of the Democratic National Committee predicted today that President Truman, angry over scandals that have rocked his administration, will take drastic action to clean house "without delay."

Emerging from a half-hour conference with Mr. Truman at the White House, McKinney told newsmen:

"The President is very aware of the situation and he is highly concerned. He is angry over being sold down the river by some disloyal employes of the government."

The Democratic Party chieftain, himself under fire for a get-rich-quick stock deal in which he netted $68,000 profit on a $1,000 investment, said he advised Mr. Truman it was urgent that drastic steps be taken at once.

He said he recommended that the President launch an independent investigation—possibly by a non-partisan commission—of the scandals that have blown up around the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Justice Department in recent weeks.

Stock Deal Not Questioned

Asked if Mr. Truman had raised any question about his 68-to-1 stock profits, McKinney replied in the negative.

He also declared that Mr. Truman had not discussed the possibility of any "cabinet changes." Some Congress members have demanded the resignations of Attorney General McGrath, who heads the Justice Department, and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, overall boss of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

McKinney emphasized that Mr. Truman is gravely perturbed by the evidence of corruption and irregularities brought to light by a House investigating committee, and he told reporters:

"I'm inclined to think there will be action soon."

McKinney told newsmen he and Mr. Truman talked "at quite some length" about the scandals in government. He said he personally feels that those responsible for the scandals are "guilty of the highest degree of disloyalty."

Announcement Expected

McKinney said he told Mr. Truman that he could not overemphasize the importance of taking "drastic action in the immediate future—without delay."

He indicated that Mr. Truman agreed with him and suggested that a White House announcement may be forthcoming soon.

McKinney said the important thing is to "get to the bottom" of the situation as quickly as possible, in advance of the 1952 election campaigns.

"Everything depends on the speed and dispatch with which the administration acts," he said.

"As the situation has been handled by Democrats, cleaned up by Democrats, and Democrats have acted to remove the guilty as fast as they have been discovered, I am of the opinion that this will not be an issue of the 1952 campaign."

Pleven Is Given Confidence Vote

PARIS, Dec. 11 (AP)—The French National Assembly today gave Premier Rene Pleven a vote of confidence, 376 to 240, on his refusal to have other issues tied to consideration of the Schuman plan treaty to pool West Europe's coal and steel.

Socialists, Radical Socialists and smaller groups allied with them joined the Popular Republican Movement of Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, the author of the plan, to give Pleven a majority unusually large by assembly standards.

Communists and the followers of Gen. Charles De Gaulle made up the bulk of the opposition.

Just before the assembly adjourned, Plevin announced he would make final ratification of the Schuman plan a vote of confidence also.

This means that a final parliamentary vote on the plan will be delayed again—this time until the Thursday session. The French constitution requires that a major vote of confidence not be held until 48 hours after it has been announced.

Pleven had staked the fate of his cabinet against a motion by a rightist deputy, Paul Andre, that would have sent a proposed treaty on the plan back to a committee for further study.

Franchot Tone Fined $400 For Spitting On Columnist

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Dec. 11 (AP)—For spitting in the face of a red-haired newspaperwoman, Franchot Tone was fined $400 today.

He also apologized in court—"I am very sorry for what happened"—and was put on probation for a year. A 45-day jail sentence was suspended.

Florabel Muir, who writes for the New York News and the Los Angeles Mirror, was not present to hear the apology.

Reversing a previous plea, the actor answered "guilty" in a soft voice to her charge of battery. Miss Muir told sheriff's officers that Tone spat on her right cheek in Ciro's night spot last Oct. 29.

Tone told the court:

"One of the charges in this complaint is true.

"But I did not kick or throttle the complaintant or use foul language."

He continued:

"My counsel has advised me that provocation can not be used as a defense.

"But the complaintant has admitted in print that she listened in on telephone conversations of the woman I was going to marry" (Barbara Payton).

"I must say publicly I am very sorry for what happened and try to apologize to the complaintant as best I can."

Tallulah Sweeps Angrily Out Of Her Ex-Maid's Trial

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Tallulah Bankhead today swept angrily out of a court trial in which a lawyer charged that her former maid-secretary paid for "marijuana cigarets, cocaine, booze and sex" for the actress.

"I was disgusted with the tactics of the defense attorney," Miss Bankhead said after the lawyer had asked the court to make her "keep her mouth shut."

She returned after about 20 minutes.

More than 100 would-be spectators were turned away as the grand larceny and forgery trial of Mrs. Evyleen R. Cronin, 59, Miss Bankhead's ex-personal secretary, opened before a packed court room.

She is named in 32 counts for allegedly raising the sums of Miss Bankhead's checks.

The actress' tempestuous departure came after Defense Attorney Fred G. Morritt had twice complained of her "sounds and facial expressions.

"She is making remarks and sounds that might be all right on a radio program," Morritt said, "but I ask the court that you order her to keep her mouth shut."

General Sessions Court Judge Harold E. Stevens said he had seen nothing disturbing about Miss Bankhead's conduct, except for a fit of coughing during the morning session, and refused to reprimand her.

Fletcher, who is making visits to all county juvenile courts in Maryland, talked with Magistrate Alban C. Thompson on matters which may be of benefit to all boys coming under the local court's jurisdiction.

Thompson explained the Maryland Training School for Boys is where juvenile delinquents are sent instead of being lodged in a jail. The institution contains a regular school for boys, a church and chapel.

He said only pocket sized books can be sent because of shipping limitations. Additional shipments will be sent as the books are collected. Donors are asked to call the Legion.

Jurors Receive

winter the per day payments were upped 20 per cent to $6. In addition out-of-town jurors received 5 cents a mile each day of each week that they served.

Per trial payments to jurors this term were only 8.8 per cent above the October, 1950, term. The rate of payment was increased a flat 20 per cent and in addition mileage payments were much higher.

One reason for the comparatively small per trial increase was that a new system was instituted during the civil trials, which began early in November. Instead of summoning all jurors from the panel to the Court House every trial date, Sheriff Edward R. Muir's deputies consulted with rival attorneys in advance and had unneeded jurors stricken. As a result only the 12 jurors who actually served had to be paid. Under the old system every juror who answered to his name in the court room received payment whether he served or not.

Deputy Sheriff Edgar M. Lewis, who handled much of the details in summoning jurors, believes the new arrangement saved the coutny about $1,000.

Stanky Is Given 2-Year Contract

Eddie Signs Pact As Cards' Pilot

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 11 (AP) — Eddie Stanky, fiery New York Giant second baseman, signed a two-year contract as manager with the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Stanky came with an agreement with Cardinal owner Fred Saigh after a conference here which lasted nearly three hours. No salary figures were mentioned but it was understood that Stanky would get around $37,000 a year.

Saigh said Stanky had been signed as a playing manager. Stanky sidestepped the question of what he would do about Red Schoendienst, one of the top second basemen in the business, by saying they would get around to that when spring training comes.

The Cardinals had to give up veteran left-handed pitcher Max Lanier and Outfielder Chuck Diering for the peppery little second baseman who last season fused the amazing Giant pennant drive at the season's finish.

When asked about salary, Stanky said, "I only hope Santa Claus makes my three kids as happy on Christmas morning as Mr. Saigh has made me today."

That brought a smile from Saigh and a "that was very nice, Eddie. Not many fellows say that about me these days."

Arrangements already have been announced providing for playoffs should the Bears and Rams end in a tie for the conference crown. The two would playoff in Los Angeles.

$32,649,573 Is Bet In West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 11 (AP)—Horse racing fans bet a total of $32,649,573 at three West Virginia tracks this year, not including the 18-day winter meeting now in progress at Charles Town.

Figures obtained from the racing commission today showed that the state obtained $1,059,228 in tax revenue from the sport, with the Charles Town winter total still to be added.

The revenue figure includes a three percent tax on the parimutuel total and flat daily levies of $250 at the half-mile Charles Town and Wheeling Downs tracks and $500 at Waterford Park, a one-mile northern panhandle track which operated for the first time this year.

The flat daily tax was not levied on the six-day horse show at Charles Town earlier this year. That track also had other meetings of 16 and 13 days.

Eddie Signs Pact As Cards' Pilot

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 11 (AP) — Eddie Stanky, fiery New York Giant second baseman, signed a two-year contract as manager with the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Stanky came with an agreement with Cardinal owner Fred Saigh after a conference here which lasted nearly three hours. No salary figures were mentioned but it was understood that Stanky would get around $37,000 a year.

Saigh said Stanky had been signed as a playing manager. Stanky sidestepped the question of what he would do about Red Schoendienst, one of the top second basemen in the business, by saying they would get around to that when spring training comes.

The Cardinals had to give up veteran left-handed pitcher Max Lanier and Outfielder Chuck Diering for the peppery little second baseman who last season fused the amazing Giant pennant drive at the season's finish.

When asked about salary, Stanky said, "I only hope Santa Claus makes my three kids as happy on Christmas morning as Mr. Saigh has made me today."

That brought a smile from Saigh and a "that was very nice, Eddie. Not many fellows say that about me these days."

Plans For Playoffs Announced By NFL

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11 (AP) — Commissioner Bert Bell announced today that should the Detroit Lions and San Francisco Forty Niners finish in a tie for the National Football League's National Conference title the two teams would meet in a playoff in San Francisco Dec. 23.

The Lions and Forty Niners oppose each other next Sunday. Should the Lions win, they would take the conference crown and qualify to meet the Cleveland Browns, American Conference champs, in the NFL title game in Detroit on Dec. 23.

Arrangements already have been announced providing for playoffs should the Bears and Rams end in a tie for the conference crown. The two would playoff in Los Angeles.

$32,649,573 Is Bet In West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 11 (AP)—Horse racing fans bet a total of $32,649,573 at three West Virginia tracks this year, not including the 18-day winter meeting now in progress at Charles Town.

Figures obtained from the racing commission today showed that the state obtained $1,059,228 in tax revenue from the sport, with the Charles Town winter total still to be added.

The revenue figure includes a three percent tax on the pari-mutuel total and flat daily levies of $250 at the half-mile Charles Town and Wheeling Downs tracks and $500 at Waterford Park, a one-mile northern panhandle track which operated for the first time this year.

The flat daily tax was not levied on the six-day horse show at Charles Town earlier this year. That track also had other meetings of 16 and 13 days.

Bars To A Ticket

Chief Justice Vinson could hardly make a public show of interest in the next Democratic nomination for President, even if he were disposed to go after it, but latest advices from Washington are that he would decline to be the candidate if asked by Mr. Truman or later by the Democratic convention.

Among the reasons cited are Vinson's friendship for Vice President Barkley, a fellow Kentuckian who has shown a lively interest in continuing in his present office, and the constitutional bar to candidates from the same state running for President and Vice President on the same ticket.

All the Constitution says on this point is that the presidential electors shall vote by ballot "for President and Vice President one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves." Is Vinson or Barkley now an "inhabitant" of Kentucky? If so, and a Vinson-Barkley ticket carried the state in 1952, Kentucky could not cast its votes in the electoral college. Electoral votes of the other 47 states would not be affected.

A more potent reason for not putting both Vinson and Barkley on the same ticket is the rule of national politics that at least one of the candidates should come from a state with a large number of electoral votes. Eighteen states at present have more of these than Kentucky's 10. (The top five are New York, Pennsylvania, California, Illinois and Ohio.) Kentucky is down one from 1948 when Barkley shared the ticket with Truman.

Excepting Lincoln, who was born in Kentucky, but lived in Illinois at the time of his nomination, the last pre-Barkley Kentuckian to have a place on a major party presidential ticket was John C. Breckenridge who was elected vice president in 1856.

States Of Emergency

The American youth who comes of age and casts his first ballot in 1952 will have spent the greater part of his adolescence under conditions of national emergency. The latest formal state of emergency will be one year old on Sunday. It was proclaimed by President Truman after the Chinese Reds had intervened in Korea, and when MacArthur's forces were in retreat from the Yalu.

Truman followed the example set by President Roosevelt in 1941 by announcing the state of emergency in a fireside chat. On May 27, 1941, when Britain was fighting alone against the dictators, FDR told the country by radio: "We will not accept a Hitler dominated world. . . . I have tonight issued a proclamation that an unlimited state of national emergency exists."

It was necessary to use the word "unlimited" because on September 8, 1939, one week after the outbreak of the war in Europe, Roosevelt had declared a "limited" state of emergency which was still in effect. The main purpose of the 1939 proclamation was to suspend provisions of an old anti-deficit law and allow spending in excess of congressional appropriations for the armed services.

The new voter in 1952 will not remember the bank closings ordered March 6, 1933, within 48 hours of FDR's inauguration. The 1933 banking emergency did not last as long, but brought more immediate and acute repercussions than did the national emergencies proclaimed in 1939, 1941 or 1950.

Music, At 109

If there be such in Europe (there are in Russia) who are inclined to sneer at American culture, announcement that the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra will give its 5,000th concert, in Carnegie Hall on December 13, should give pause. At age 109, the New York orchestra is the third oldest of its kind in the world.

Oldest is the Philharmonic of London, founded in 1813. But the Vienna Philharmonic, second oldest, began its career a mere 11 days before the New York Philharmonic gave its first concert on December 7, 1842. That was at the Apollo Rooms, which stood on the east side of Broadway between Walker and Canal Streets. The orchestra began playing in Carnegie Hall in the season of 1892-93 and has been there since.

Heard on the commemorative 5,000th program will be two compositions given at the first concert—Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and New Overture in D by the Bohemian composer, Johann Wenzeslaus Kalliwoda. In recognition of the fact that Felix Mendelssohn was elected an honorary member of the Philharmonic-Symphony Society in 1846, the orchestra will also play the intermezzo and scherzo from "Midsummer Night's Dream," played during the first season.

At 109 years of age, the Philharmonic orchestra is a robust organization of the highest musical standards and repute.

Million Dollar Scandal

"Swartwoutism" is a useful word that has dropped out of the American language. To our grandfathers and great grandfathers it meant thievery in public office. Sam Swartwout, Tammany politician and close adviser to President Jackson, is the only man who ever succeeded in appropriating to his own uses $1,000,000 of federal funds.

As a reward for past political services Swartwout was appointed by Jackson in 1828 as collector of the Port of New York, then the richest public office in the gift of the national administration. He was continued in that post by Van Buren but fled to Europe in 1838 when shortages were found in his accounts. A congressional investigation disclosed that he had used customs collections to speculate in lands, canals and railways, generally on the losing side.

In 1839, Representative Duncan, a Whig from Ohio, gave currency to a term still in popular use when he castigated the "committee to whitewash the black frauds and corrupt practices of Swartwout."

The forgotten term "Swartwoutism" may have some application to current scandals, but the remembered term "whitewash" can hardly be applied to this year's investigations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and the tax division of the Justice Department.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

The Educated Diabetic

There is no substitute for knowledge, especially when it concerns the management of an illness. We refer to a thorough understanding rather than to the proverbial "little knowledge" that is so dangerous. In some conditions the less the patient knows, the better. But in others such as diabetes, the situation is reversed.

ledge, there are no schools for the rather than curable, the individual must contend with it for life and it is just plain horsesense for him to find out everything he can about his ailment. Although to my knowledge, there ars no schools for the layman where diabetic management is taught, the subject is just as important to the victim as learning to read, add, or subtract.

Important considerations are diet, insulin, and the care of the body. Dietetics is a science in itself and unless the diabetic is started on the right path he is likely to have difficulty selecting the proper food and an adequate variety. Food values often are misunderstood. Physicians hear such remarks as, "I always eat whole wheat bread instead of white bread or potatoes." Actually there is little difference in the carbohydrate content of white and whole wheat bread and the latter contains three times as much of the substance as does potatoes. "I use honey instead of sugar for baking cakes," the housewife may say, not realizing that honey is 85 per cent "sugar" and 15 per cent water.

The best plan is to consult a dietitian initially. She interprets the physician's dietary instructions on the number of grams of fat, carbohydrate, and protein permitted and puts them into practical form such as teaspoons, cupfuls, or grains. The menus are planned and a list of substitutes is worked out. The dietitian suggests reading material that will offer more detailed understanding of foods. (We also have a list of books on diabetes that can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope.) Once information along this line is digested it becomes a simple matter to incorporate new foods into the menus, thereby supplying a variety without affecting the malady.

Not all diabetics require insulin but those who do should learn how to give their own injections. This includes the care of the needle and syringe, how to measure the exact dose, cleanse the skin, and insert the needle. Poise and practice are required and the job should not be relegated to someone else. After all, the patient may be caught short some time if he is away from the person who gives him the hypos.

The diabetic who understands his disease has a high respect for insulin. He realizes that too little will not solve his problem and too much will throw him into shock. As a result, he rarely alters the dose without consulting his physician. Furthermore, he is acquainted with the need for testing the urine daily or several times a week. The disorder is under good control when the diet is adequate and the urine sugar free. The diabetic's education is lacking if he does not know how to take care of the feet. An infected toe may prove a costly affair not only in medical fees but in disability, suffering, and anxiety. This is one of the penalties of the disease and every precaution must be taken to prevent bruises and cracking of the skin. Proper shoes and hose also play a role.

TOMORROW: Dr. Van Dellen discusses soil nutrients that aid human nutrition.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Mystery Man Grunewald Covers Tracks Well; Wields Powerful Influence With Government High-Ups! Senator Reluctant To Investigate Five-Percenter

WASHINGTON — Henry Grunewald, king of the five-percenters, has known more important people, fixed more interesting influence deals, yet kept out of the limelight—until recently—than almost anyone else in Washington. He has had his finger in all sorts of government pie—from income taxes and war surplus to alien property and defense contracts. Yet no one knows much about him.

Almost two years ago, this columnist learned that Grunewald had arranged to tap Howard Hughes' telephone wire for Senator Brewster and Pan American World Airways at a time when Pan Am wanted to buy Howard Hughes' Trans World Airlines.

Later, I was able to turn over certain evidence to Senator Matt Neely (D. W. Va.), chairman of the District of Columbia Committee, which resulted in a Senate investigation.

However, getting the evidence on the elusive Mr. Grunewald, sometimes called "The Dutchman," was like tracking down a will-o'-the-wisp.

The investigation of Grunewald started by consulting the telephone book. He had a number in the Munsey Building, but that phone led to the law offices of one Ed Martin. Significantly, he later turned out to be the same Ed Martin who fronted for a New York corporation formed overnight to get a cut of a huge purchase of Chinese Nationalist gasoline. This mysterious deal was blocked when "commissions" were suspected.

Attorney Martin, when queried about Grunewald, explained that he had inherited the office space from Henry but neglected to notify the phone company. The minute the column representative stepped outside the door, however, Martin picked up the phone, called Senator Bridges' office, and tersely reported: "A guy named Anderson was here asking about Henry."

Later, it developed that Martin was actually on Grunewald's payroll.

Grunewald's Mystery Suite

Next lead was that Grunewald occupied a suite on the fourth floor of the Washington Hotel. Investigation revealed that he used the suite as an office. However, it was strangely registered under the name of Henry Woodring, former secretary of war. Queried by phone, in Topeka, Kansas, Woodring explained that he and Grunewald had once used the suite together on a business deal and that Grunewald must have neglected to change the hotel records.

A tip from a hotel bellboy developed the fact that Grunewald was also chummy with another guest on the fourth floor of the Washington Hotel — Dan Bolich, then No. 2 man in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Bolich was a free spender around the hotel, probably spending more than a government salary permitted. He had been seen in the company of New York underworld boss Frankie Costello.

Further research developed that Grunewald had many addresses in addition to his Munsey Building phone number and Washington Hotel headquarters. He also kept an apartment at Washington's fashionable Westchester, where he had two private phone numbers—Woodley 5700 and Sterling 2158—though he usually called from a phone booth in the Westchester lobby—Woodley 9705.

He also owned $75,000 homes in Miami, Fla., and Spring Lake, N. J. Deputy Commissioner Bolich also had a summer home at the latter place. For commuting purposes, Grunewald owned a fleet of at least three limousines.

Senator Brewster's Friend

As we delved deeper into the wire-top story, we learned that Grunewald had the habit of visiting Senator Brewster once or twice a week and that they called each other by first names. We also were able to prove that Brewster paid the expenses of Grunewald's wire-tapping friend, Lt. Joe Shimon of the Washington police force, while he was listening in on Howard Hughes's private telephone conversations.

Senate Feeble Probe

Meanwhile, Senator Neely appointed Senator Claude Pepper of Florida as chairman of a subcommittee to probe the Grunewald-Shimon-Brewster wire-tapping. But when this column placed the evidence before Senator Pepper, including Grunewald's activities, Pepper remarked:

"Is Henry mixed up in this?"

Shortly thereafter, Pepper seemed to lose interest in the investigation and took a round-the-world trip with Senator Brewster, the man he was supposed to investigate.

Meanwhile, my curiosity about Grunewald was heightened by the discovery that he had been mixed up in a black-market liquor deal. This had been investigated by the Alcohol Tax Unit, but Grunewald's part in it was never made public.

Many High Friends

Significantly, the Alcohol Tax Unit is under the direct control of the Internal Revenue Bureau. And a little probing as to why nothing had been done about Grunewald and his black market case revealed the interesting fact that he was a bosom friend of three key men in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Not only was he a friend of Deputy Commissioner Bolish, but of Commissioner George Schoeneman and General Counsel Charlie Oliphant.

MERRY GO ROUND—GAL TWO

Both Schoeneman and Oliphant had spent vacations at Grunewald's swank home at Miami Beach. Schoeneman also dropped around for spaghetti dinners at Grunewald's apartment in the Westchester.

Interviewing Oliphant about his friendship with Grunewald brought forth scant information.

"He is a friend of the family," Oliphant explained.

"Is he also a friend of the family of Schoeneman and Bolich?"

Oliphant admitted that all three knew him, that Schoeneman and himself had visited Grunewald's Miami home.

"Did you know that Grunewald was investigated by the Alcohol Tax Unit in connection with a black market case? Did you know Grunewald had a reputation around town for fixing tax cases?"

To both questions, Oliphant replied: "No."

"What is Grunewald's business?"

"I have no idea," shrugged Oliphant.

It was suggested to Oliphant that it seemed strange for a man in his position to accept the hospitality of a man without even knowing his business. He made no comment.

"The Dutchman" is also a caller at the office of Vice President Barkley and twice has turned up at dinners with Jess Larson, former head of the War Assets Administration, now head of General Services. In each case, Larson said he was invited to Fordham University dinners by Grunewald's lawyer, Ed Martin. When he got to the dinner, Grunewald was conspicuously present and even sat next to him.

Larson said he found the rumor was spreading that Grunewald was the best intermediary to handle surplus property deals, so he turned down an invitation to golf with him and a "group of senators," and tried to steer clear of Grunewald in the future.

After the Dutchman learned that I was investigating him, he started an investiation of me. I am still waiting to see what, if anything, he turned up.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—Sometimes the dark clouds of gloom have their silver lining and soon reveal their own rays of hope. It is too early as yet to say that a housecleaning of the most far-reaching nature is in prospect in Washington, but the signs point to something more drastic than the government here has witnessed in decades of history.

For what is happening is a breakdown in morals that has been confined to no political party or administration—a sort of creeping paralysis that has had its origin in the Jacksonian motto: "To the victor belong the spoils."

For what's wrong with official Washington is politics—the materialistic philosophy that governmental authority is political power and that special privilege is one of the normal and natural attributes of governmental discretion.

Facing Major Crisis

What's happened really is that centralized government is face to face with its first major crisis in 50 years. The trend toward control of everything in Washington has made the states and counties and cities less and less important as the federal government has collected and disbursed most of the money. With big taxes has come big expenditures and hence big power of discretion in spending and in administration laws.

The Republicans who held power for many years came a cropper under this system. They betrayed their trust by dispensing favors to large corporations and to the special interests which had contributed most heavily to campaign funds.

When the Democrats came in crying a "new deal," the country was led to believe—through FDR's inaugural address, for example — that the "money-changers had to be driven from the temple." Here at last — the people thought—was a reform administration with all the virtues necessary for a new era. Gradually materialism began to eat its way into officialdom. The Works Progress Administration and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration were used to win the 1936 election, and many government departments which disbursed federal money used their power and influence to help win the 1940 election. Under the Roosevelt administration, the doctrine that the "end justifies the means" became the paramount approach. It became the custom to argue that, after all, the other party was much worse. Once an important federal official testified before a congressional committee that he had violated a law because he thought the objective was good. Later on he was promoted by Mr. Roosevelt to a higher post.

For years now political influence has been gnawing inside government. Many honest-minded officials who never profited a nickel themselves, and would not tolerate any illegal use of public money, have nevertheless dispensed political favors out of which privileged citizens made money.

President Truman came into office with a long background of experience in a Kansas City political machine. He believed in the Jacksonian philosophy of party politics. He made no bones about it. So did Warren Harding, a Republican President from 1920 to 1923. Now the day of reckoning has come. The political route has been exposed to be the route of corruption and malfeasance on the part of several of Mr. Truman's appointees.

Record Is Issue

Mr. Truman is not the kind of man who believes ill of his friends and political cronies. But his record in history is now the real issue. Can he prosecute as vigorously as the country demands? Will he let the chips fall where they may? Will he clean up his own administration and set an example for all time?

NATO—How Long?

By MARK SULLIVAN

A part of the Administration's foreign policy, especially important and intently discussed just now, is commonly spoken of as "strengthening Western Europe." The official term for the institution through which this policy is carried out is North Atlantic Treaty Organization. About this and various institutions and functions associated with it, most of what the public learns is fragments or facets—an extract from a speech, a summary of a meeting. So complex and widely ramified is NATO that news channels crowded with many matters can do little more.

One projected part of NATO is comparatively simple. The common term for it is "Continental European Army." The project is that five Western European countries — France, Italy, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg—form a united army under one over-all command, having the same uniform, using the same arms and in general a single army. Parallel with the projected unity army is a project looking toward economic and, in one degree or another, political unity. The five countries would become in several respects one, a kind of United States of Western Europe.

From the point of view of the United States there is good reason for approval of the projected union of five Western European countries; it is an essential part of our foreign policy. Indeed, during several decades a United States of Europe has been proposed from time to time, as an ideal and as politically and economically necessary; among others, Prime Minister Churchill of Britain has advocated it.

Mistrust An Obstacle

As steps are taken to make the projected union actual, obstacles intervene. The ministers of the separate countries meet, as at Rome recently, and approve the project. Then they return to their respective countries and there encounter oppositions inherent in independence, tradition and national institutions. An over-all obstacle is that the five countries for which union is projected have different languages. A variation of the projected union is that Western Germany be included, and this creates additional obstacles. Between Germany and France there is long-standing hostility or suspicion. It was expected or hoped that Britain would adhere to the projected union, but the British government says that while it will co-operate it will not join.

Throughout discussions of the projected five-nation European army of the 12 nation NATO as a whole, there is a common characteristic which is a direct concern of the United States. This is an assumption that whatever is done about the projected European army or NATO as a whole the United States must provide more arms and more economic aid. Here we are obliged to consider how much more we can give, either of arms or of economic aid or both.

This must be estimated in connection with other problems. Currently there are contradictory view from authoritative sources about the degree to which our program for producing armament has progressed. There is another contradiction about the extent to which it is possible or practicable to turn the country's economy to production of materials for war. Also in considering how much we can send to Western European countries we must consider what we may need to send to Korea.

U. S. Could Collapse

It is not merely quantity that must be considered, it is also cost. With each day of rising prices and inflation, production of armament costs more. It is tenable to estimate that at our present pace of production of armament, and at the pace at which rising prices and inflation have gone on since the outbreak in Korea a year and a half ago, continuation for three years more would bring the United States to economic collapse. And it is a practically accepted assumption that economic collapse of the United States would mean loss of the world struggle against Russian Communism as surely as any military effort that Russia is likely to attempt.

It is very probable that Congress will not be willing to continue appropriations for economic help to the countries of Western Europe in quantities as large as Congress has been appropriating during nearly five years past. It is probable there will be some reduction. At the same time the policy of strengthening Western Europe economically and militarily will continue. The problem is to arrive at a balance between what we can give without incurring economic collapse fatal to us and Western Europe alike, and what the present condition of the economies of Western European countries can provide.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Who Should Teach

Nearly every town has its woman's club and if I refer especially to the one in Scarsdale, New York, it is only because they have projected themselves into the controversy over American education. They objected to Rabbi Benjamin Schultz lecturing on schools and the Communist invasion of our schools without the other side being presented at the same meeting. How can there be another side to this question?

President Robert G. Sproul, of the University of California, put this issue in these words:

"Historically, Americans have taken their freedom for granted. In recent years, we have learned taht we were wrong — that freedom is always vulnerable. We have learned, too, that we were wrong — that freedom is always vulnerable. We have learned that we were wrong — kind of freedom is seriously threatened by the power philosophy of that international conspiracy mislabeled as the Communist party — a philosophy that sterilizes the minds and distorts the morals of men, that sets class against class, brother against brother, and man against God. If this philosophy were confined to one nation, or even to a group of nations, and practiced only within their borders, it might be of little more than academic concern to us. The fact is, that the philosophy is being used as the basis of a power and propaganda drive for the creation of police states and the establishment by any means, including violence, of a new science of economics and a new form of society. . ."

As the level on which this work of the devil starts is the kindergarten and as it is carried through the entire life of our nation, it becomes increasingly important to study the schools to which we entrust our children, the textbooks they use, the methods that are employed to weaken character, lessen their bonds to tradition, and divorce them from faith in God and love for country.

I read the year-book of the Scarsdale Woman's Club and find a commendable organization serving the community in many aspects. Scarsdale is one of those bedroom suburbs of New York City where those who can afford to work in the big city and enjoy suburban life buy their own homes, furnish them tastefully, carefully keep gardens and compete in homemade cuisine fancifully garnished. Such people dislike being regarded as Communists or even left-wingers. They object to their patriotism being questioned. Many vote Republican. Most think that they are liberals. Mrs. Gladys F. Carroll, president of this club, wrote this paragraph as a foreword to the report:

"This year marks the 175th anniversary of the independence of our country. It was through faith and courage that this nation was founded. The faith of our fathers is still one of our great remaining forces. Let us cherish this precious heritage."

Yet, in two recent situations, this club ranged itself on the side of ignoring the menace of the corruption of the life of our nation through Communist infiltration. It is the same puzzling phenomenon as a proposition recently made by a motion picture company, whose affairs I am investigating, that those who oppose communism in motion pictures, limit their objections to pictures made since April, 1951. Why that date? Why not any other date? If the thing is evil, does the date matter?

These puzzles require analysis. It is absurd to speak about "Park Avenue liberals" without asking why their brand of liberalism only serves the Communists but never serves those who are fighting the Communist infiltration into our schools, or even the substitution of functional training for character building.

What is called "progressive education" is not in any way associated with the Communist movement, but we must note that since its introduction into our educational system, patriotism has been weakened. As the child is taught by activities rather than by precept, the virtues of our civilization are not strengthened in the child because virtue is "preachy" teaching, which these educators avoid. Actually, the child is left without a rudder.

President Sproul said:

". . . I believe that our American universities must take an affirmative attitude toward the basic American value of responsible freedom. They must be the chief protagonists of our civilization, aggressive in their defense of our traditions, and vigorous in their opposition to those who would destroy them."

It may be fascinating fun for the rich to be so liberal that they pave the way for the Communists, but it does not make sense. And most of the ladies in these woman's clubs are, in their own affairs, very sensible.

Bars To A Ticket

Chief Justice Vinson could hardly make a public show of interest in the next Democratic nomination for President, even if he were disposed to go after it, but latest advices from Washington are that he would decline to be the candidate if asked by Mr. Truman or later by the Democratic convention.

Among the reasons cited are Vinson's friendship for Vice President Barkley, a fellow Kentuckian who has shown a lively interest in continuing in his present office, and the constitutional bar to candidates from the same state running for President and Vice President on the same ticket.

All the Constitution says on this point is that the presidential electors shall vote by ballot "for President and Vice President one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves." Is Vinson or Barkley now an "inhabitant" of Kentucky? If so, and a Vinson-Barkley ticket carried the state in 1952, Kentucky could not cast its votes in the electoral college. Electoral votes of the other 47 states would not be affected.

A more potent reason for not putting both Vinson and Barkley on the same ticket is the rule of national politics that at least one of the candidates should come from a state with a large number of electoral votes. Eighteen states at present have more of these than Kentucky's 10. (The top five are New York, Pennsylvania, California, Illinois and Ohio.) Kentucky is down one from 1948 when Barkley shared the ticket with Truman.

Excepting Lincoln, who was born in Kentucky, but lived in Illinois at the time of his nomination, the last pre-Barkley Kentuckian to have a place on a major party presidential ticket was John C. Breckenridge who was elected vice president in 1856.

States Of Emergency

The American youth who comes of age and casts his first ballot in 1952 will have spent the greater part of his adolescence under conditions of national emergency. The latest formal state of emergency will be one year old on Sunday. It was proclaimed by President Truman after the Chinese Reds had intervened in Korea, and when MacArthur's forces were in retreat from the Yalu.

Truman followed the example set by President Roosevelt in 1941 by announcing the state of emergency in a fireside chat. On May 27, 1941, when Britain was fighting alone against the dictators, FDR told the country by radio: "We will not accept a Hitler dominated world. . . . I have tonight issued a proclamation that an unlimited state of national emergency exists."

It was necessary to use the word "unlimited" because on September 8, 1939, one week after the outbreak of the war in Europe, Roosevelt had declared a "limited" state of emergency which was still in effect. The main purpose of the 1939 proclamation was to suspend provisions of an old anti-deficit law and allow spending in excess of congressional appropriations for the armed services.

The new voter in 1952 will not remember the bank closings ordered March 6, 1933, within 48 hours of FDR's inauguration. The 1933 banking emergency did not last as long, but brought more immediate and acute repercussions than did the national emergencies proclaimed in 1939, 1941 or 1950.

Music, At 109

If there be such in Europe (there are in Russia) who are inclined to sneer at American culture, announcement that the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra will give its 5,000th concert, in Carnegie Hall on December 13, should give pause. At age 109, the New York orchestra is the third oldest of its kind in the world.

Oldest is the Philharmonic of London, founded in 1813. But the Vienna Philharmonic, second oldest, began its career a mere 11 days before the New York Philharmonic gave its first concert on December 7, 1842. That was at the Apollo Rooms, which stood on the east side of Broadway between Walker and Canal Streets. The orchestra began playing in Carnegie Hall in the season of 1892-93 and has been there since.

Heard on the commemorative 5,000th program will be two compositions given at the first concert—Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and New Overture in D by the Bohemian composer, Johann Wenzeslaus Kalliwoda. In recognition of the fact that Felix Mendelssohn was elected an honorary member of the Philharmonic-Symphony Society in 1846, the orchestra will also play the intermezzo and scherzo from "Midsummer Night's Dream," played during the first season.

At 109 years of age, the Philharmonic orchestra is a robust organization of the highest musical standards and repute.

Million Dollar Scandal

"Swartwoutism" is a useful word that has dropped out of the American language. To our grandfathers and great grandfathers it meant thievery in public office. Sam Swartwout, Tammany politician and close adviser to President Jackson, is the only man who ever succeeded in appropriating to his own uses $1,000,000 of federal funds.

As a reward for past political services Swartwout was appointed by Jackson in 1828 as collector of the Port of New York, then the richest public office in the gift of the national administration. He was continued in that post by Van Buren but fled to Europe in 1838 when shortages were found in his accounts. A congressional investigation disclosed that he had used customs collections to speculate in lands, canals and railways, generally on the losing side.

In 1839, Representative Duncan, a Whig from Ohio, gave currency to a term still in popular use when he castigated the "committee to whitewash the black frauds and corrupt practices of Swartwout."

The forgotten term "Swartwoutism" may have some application to current scandals, but the remembered term "whitewash" can hardly be applied to this year's investigations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and the tax division of the Justice Department.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

The Educated Diabetic

There is no substitute for knowledge, especially when it concerns the management of an illness. We refer to a thorough understanding rather than to the proverbial "little knowledge" that is so dangerous. In some conditions the less the patient knows, the better. But in others such as diabetes, the situation is reversed.

ledge, there are no schools for the rather than curable, the individual must contend with it for life and it is just plain horsesense for him to find out everything he can about his ailment. Although to my knowledge, there ars no schools for the layman where diabetic management is taught, the subject is just as important to the victim as learning to read, add, or subtract.

Important considerations are diet, insulin, and the care of the body. Dietetics is a science in itself and unless the diabetic is started on the right path he is likely to have difficulty selecting the proper food and an adequate variety. Food values often are misunderstood. Physicians hear such remarks as, "I always eat whole wheat bread instead of white bread or potatoes." Actually there is little difference in the carbohydrate content of white and whole wheat bread and the latter contains three times as much of the substance as does potatoes. "I use honey instead of sugar for baking cakes," the housewife may say, not realizing that honey is 85 per cent "sugar" and 15 per cent water.

The best plan is to consult a dietitian initially. She interprets the physician's dietary instructions on the number of grams of fat, carbohydrate, and protein permitted and puts them into practical form such as teaspoons, cupfuls, or grains. The menus are planned and a list of substitutes is worked out. The dietitian suggests reading material that will offer more detailed understanding of foods. (We also have a list of books on diabetes that can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope.) Once information along this line is digested it becomes a simple matter to incorporate new foods into the menus, thereby supplying a variety without affecting the malady.

Not all diabetics require insulin but those who do should learn how to give their own injections. This includes the care of the needle and syringe, how to measure the exact dose, cleanse the skin, and insert the needle. Poise and practice are required and the job should not be relegated to someone else. After all, the patient may be caught short some time if he is away from the person who gives him the hypos.

The diabetic who understands his disease has a high respect for insulin. He realizes that too little will not solve his problem and too much will throw him into shock. As a result, he rarely alters the dose without consulting his physician. Furthermore, he is acquainted with the need for testing the urine daily or several times a week. The disorder is under good control when the diet is adequate and the urine sugar free. The diabetic's education is lacking if he does not know how to take care of the feet. An infected toe may prove a costly affair not only in medical fees but in disability, suffering, and anxiety. This is one of the penalties of the disease and every precaution must be taken to prevent bruises and cracking of the skin. Proper shoes and hose also play a role.

TOMORROW: Dr. Van Dellen discusses soil nutrients that aid human nutrition.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Mystery Man Grunewald Covers Tracks Well; Wields Powerful Influence With Government High-Ups! Senator Reluctant To Investigate Five-Percenter

WASHINGTON — Henry Grunewald, king of the five-percenters, has known more important people, fixed more interesting influence deals, yet kept out of the limelight—until recently—than almost anyone else in Washington. He has had his finger in all sorts of government pie—from income taxes and war surplus to alien property and defense contracts. Yet no one knows much about him.

Almost two years ago, this columnist learned that Grunewald had arranged to tap Howard Hughes' telephone wire for Senator Brewster and Pan American World Airways at a time when Pan Am wanted to buy Howard Hughes' Trans World Airlines.

Later, I was able to turn over certain evidence to Senator Matt Neely (D. W. Va.), chairman of the District of Columbia Committee, which resulted in a Senate investigation.

However, getting the evidence on the elusive Mr. Grunewald, sometimes called "The Dutchman," was like tracking down a will-o'-the-wisp.

The investigation of Grunewald started by consulting the telephone book. He had a number in the Munsey Building, but that phone led to the law offices of one Ed Martin. Significantly, he later turned out to be the same Ed Martin who fronted for a New York corporation formed overnight to get a cut of a huge purchase of Chinese Nationalist gasoline. This mysterious deal was blocked when "commissions" were suspected.

Attorney Martin, when queried about Grunewald, explained that he had inherited the office space from Henry but neglected to notify the phone company. The minute the column representative stepped outside the door, however, Martin picked up the phone, called Senator Bridges' office, and tersely reported: "A guy named Anderson was here asking about Henry."

Later, it developed that Martin was actually on Grunewald's payroll.

Grunewald's Mystery Suite

Next lead was that Grunewald occupied a suite on the fourth floor of the Washington Hotel. Investigation revealed that he used the suite as an office. However, it was strangely registered under the name of Henry Woodring, former secretary of war. Queried by phone, in Topeka, Kansas, Woodring explained that he and Grunewald had once used the suite together on a business deal and that Grunewald must have neglected to change the hotel records.

A tip from a hotel bellboy developed the fact that Grunewald was also chummy with another guest on the fourth floor of the Washington Hotel — Dan Bolich, then No. 2 man in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Bolich was a free spender around the hotel, probably spending more than a government salary permitted. He had been seen in the company of New York underworld boss Frankie Costello.

Further research developed that Grunewald had many addresses in addition to his Munsey Building phone number and Washington Hotel headquarters. He also kept an apartment at Washington's fashionable Westchester, where he had two private phone numbers—Woodley 5700 and Sterling 2158—though he usually called from a phone booth in the Westchester lobby—Woodley 9705.

He also owned $75,000 homes in Miami, Fla., and Spring Lake, N. J. Deputy Commissioner Bolich also had a summer home at the latter place. For commuting purposes, Grunewald owned a fleet of at least three limousines.

Senator Brewster's Friend

As we delved deeper into the wire-top story, we learned that Grunewald had the habit of visiting Senator Brewster once or twice a week and that they called each other by first names. We also were able to prove that Brewster paid the expenses of Grunewald's wire-tapping friend, Lt. Joe Shimon of the Washington police force, while he was listening in on Howard Hughes's private telephone conversations.

Senate Feeble Probe

Meanwhile, Senator Neely appointed Senator Claude Pepper of Florida as chairman of a subcommittee to probe the Grunewald-Shimon-Brewster wire-tapping. But when this column placed the evidence before Senator Pepper, including Grunewald's activities, Pepper remarked:

"Is Henry mixed up in this?"

Shortly thereafter, Pepper seemed to lose interest in the investigation and took a round-the-world trip with Senator Brewster, the man he was supposed to investigate.

Meanwhile, my curiosity about Grunewald was heightened by the discovery that he had been mixed up in a black-market liquor deal. This had been investigated by the Alcohol Tax Unit, but Grunewald's part in it was never made public.

Many High Friends

Significantly, the Alcohol Tax Unit is under the direct control of the Internal Revenue Bureau. And a little probing as to why nothing had been done about Grunewald and his black market case revealed the interesting fact that he was a bosom friend of three key men in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Not only was he a friend of Deputy Commissioner Bolish, but of Commissioner George Schoeneman and General Counsel Charlie Oliphant.

MERRY GO ROUND—GAL TWO

Both Schoeneman and Oliphant had spent vacations at Grunewald's swank home at Miami Beach. Schoeneman also dropped around for spaghetti dinners at Grunewald's apartment in the Westchester.

Interviewing Oliphant about his friendship with Grunewald brought forth scant information.

"He is a friend of the family," Oliphant explained.

"Is he also a friend of the family of Schoeneman and Bolich?"

Oliphant admitted that all three knew him, that Schoeneman and himself had visited Grunewald's Miami home.

"Did you know that Grunewald was investigated by the Alcohol Tax Unit in connection with a black market case? Did you know Grunewald had a reputation around town for fixing tax cases?"

To both questions, Oliphant replied: "No."

"What is Grunewald's business?"

"I have no idea," shrugged Oliphant.

It was suggested to Oliphant that it seemed strange for a man in his position to accept the hospitality of a man without even knowing his business. He made no comment.

"The Dutchman" is also a caller at the office of Vice President Barkley and twice has turned up at dinners with Jess Larson, former head of the War Assets Administration, now head of General Services. In each case, Larson said he was invited to Fordham University dinners by Grunewald's lawyer, Ed Martin. When he got to the dinner, Grunewald was conspicuously present and even sat next to him.

Larson said he found the rumor was spreading that Grunewald was the best intermediary to handle surplus property deals, so he turned down an invitation to golf with him and a "group of senators," and tried to steer clear of Grunewald in the future.

After the Dutchman learned that I was investigating him, he started an investiation of me. I am still waiting to see what, if anything, he turned up.

Here at last — the people thought—was a reform administration with all the virtues necessary for a new era. Gradually materialism began to eat its way into officialdom. The Works Progress Administration and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration were used to win the 1936 election, and many government departments which disbursed federal money used their power and influence to help win the 1940 election. Under the Roosevelt administration, the doctrine that the "end justifies the means" became the paramount approach. It became the custom to argue that, after all, the other party was much worse. Once an important federal official testified before a congressional committee that he had violated a law because he thought the objective was good. Later on he was promoted by Mr. Roosevelt to a higher post.

For years now political influence has been gnawing inside government. Many honest-minded officials who never profited a nickel themselves, and would not tolerate any illegal use of public money, have nevertheless dispensed political favors out of which privileged citizens made money.

President Truman came into office with a long background of experience in a Kansas City political machine. He believed in the Jacksonian philosophy of party politics. He made no bones about it. So did Warren Harding, a Republican President from 1920 to 1923. Now the day of reckoning has come. The political route has been exposed to be the route of corruption and malfeasance on the part of several of Mr. Truman's appointees.

Record Is Issue

Mr. Truman is not the kind of man who believes ill of his friends and political cronies. But his record in history is now the real issue. Can he prosecute as vigorously as the country demands? Will he let the chips fall where they may? Will he clean up his own administration and set an example for all time?

NATO—How Long?

By MARK SULLIVAN

A part of the Administration's foreign policy, especially important and intently discussed just now, is commonly spoken of as "strengthening Western Europe." The official term for the institution through which this policy is carried out is North Atlantic Treaty Organization. About this and various institutions and functions associated with it, most of what the public learns is fragments or facets—an extract from a speech, a summary of a meeting. So complex and widely ramified is NATO that news channels crowded with many matters can do little more.

One projected part of NATO is comparatively simple. The common term for it is "Continental European Army." The project is that five Western European countries — France, Italy, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg—form a united army under one over-all command, having the same uniform, using the same arms and in general a single army. Parallel with the projected unity army is a project looking toward economic and, in one degree or another, political unity. The five countries would become in several respects one, a kind of United States of Western Europe.

From the point of view of the United States there is good reason for approval of the projected union of five Western European countries; it is an essential part of our foreign policy. Indeed, during several decades a United States of Europe has been proposed from time to time, as an ideal and as politically and economically necessary; among others, Prime Minister Churchill of Britain has advocated it.

Mistrust An Obstacle

As steps are taken to make the projected union actual, obstacles intervene. The ministers of the separate countries meet, as at Rome recently, and approve the project. Then they return to their respective countries and there encounter oppositions inherent in independence, tradition and national institutions. An over-all obstacle is that the five countries for which union is projected have different languages. A variation of the projected union is that Western Germany be included, and this creates additional obstacles. Between Germany and France there is long-standing hostility or suspicion. It was expected or hoped that Britain would adhere to the projected union, but the British government says that while it will co-operate it will not join.

Throughout discussions of the projected five-nation European army of the 12 nation NATO as a whole, there is a common characteristic which is a direct concern of the United States. This is an assumption that whatever is done about the projected European army or NATO as a whole the United States must provide more arms and more economic aid. Here we are obliged to consider how much more we can give, either of arms or of economic aid or both.

This must be estimated in connection with other problems. Currently there are contradictory view from authoritative sources about the degree to which our program for producing armament has progressed. There is another contradiction about the extent to which it is possible or practicable to turn the country's economy to production of materials for war. Also in considering how much we can send to Western European countries we must consider what we may need to send to Korea.

U. S. Could Collapse

It is not merely quantity that must be considered, it is also cost. With each day of rising prices and inflation, production of armament costs more. It is tenable to estimate that at our present pace of production of armament, and at the pace at which rising prices and inflation have gone on since the outbreak in Korea a year and a half ago, continuation for three years more would bring the United States to economic collapse. And it is a practically accepted assumption that economic collapse of the United States would mean loss of the world struggle against Russian Communism as surely as any military effort that Russia is likely to attempt.

It is very probable that Congress will not be willing to continue appropriations for economic help to the countries of Western Europe in quantities as large as Congress has been appropriating during nearly five years past. It is probable there will be some reduction. At the same time the policy of strengthening Western Europe economically and militarily will continue. The problem is to arrive at a balance between what we can give without incurring economic collapse fatal to us and Western Europe alike, and what the present condition of the economies of Western European countries can provide.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Who Should Teach

Nearly every town has its woman's club and if I refer especially to the one in Scarsdale, New York, it is only because they have projected themselves into the controversy over American education. They objected to Rabbi Benjamin Schultz lecturing on schools and the Communist invasion of our schools without the other side being presented at the same meeting. How can there be another side to this question?

President Robert G. Sproul, of the University of California, put this issue in these words:

"Historically, Americans have taken their freedom for granted. In recent years, we have learned taht we were wrong — that freedom is always vulnerable. We have learned, too, that we were wrong — that freedom is always vulnerable. We have learned that we were wrong — kind of freedom is seriously threatened by the power philosophy of that international conspiracy mislabeled as the Communist party — a philosophy that sterilizes the minds and distorts the morals of men, that sets class against class, brother against brother, and man against God. If this philosophy were confined to one nation, or even to a group of nations, and practiced only within their borders, it might be of little more than academic concern to us. The fact is, that the philosophy is being used as the basis of a power and propaganda drive for the creation of police states and the establishment by any means, including violence, of a new science of economics and a new form of society. . ."

As the level on which this work of the devil starts is the kindergarten and as it is carried through the entire life of our nation, it becomes increasingly important to study the schools to which we entrust our children, the textbooks they use, the methods that are employed to weaken character, lessen their bonds to tradition, and divorce them from faith in God and love for country.

I read the year-book of the Scarsdale Woman's Club and find a commendable organization serving the community in many aspects. Scarsdale is one of those bedroom suburbs of New York City wher those who can afford to work in the big city and enjoy suburban life, buy their own homes, furnish them tastefully, carefully keep gardens and compete in homemade cuisine fancifully garnished. Such people dislike being regarded as Communists or even left-wingers. They object to their patriotism being questioned. Many vote Republican. Most think that they are liberals. Mrs. Gladys F. Carroll, president of this club, wrote this paragraph as a foreword to the report:

"This year marks the 175th anniversary of the independence of our country. It was through faith and courage that this nation was founded. The faith of our fathers is still one of our great remaining forces. Let us cherish this precious heritage."

Yet, in two recent situations, this club ranged itself on the side of ignoring the menace of the corruption of the life of our nation through Communist infiltration. It is the same puzzling phenomenon as a proposition recently made by a motion picture company, whose affairs I am investigating, that those who oppose communism in motion pictures, limit their objections to pictures made since April, 1951. Why that date? Why not any other date? If the thing is evil, does the date matter?

These puzzles require analysis. It is absurd to speak about "Park Avenue liberals" without asking why their brand of liberalism only serves the Communists but never serves those who are fighting the Communist infiltration into our schools, or even the substitution of functional training for character building.

What is called "progressive education" is not in any way associated with the Communist movement, but we must note that since its introduction into our educational system, patriotism has been weakened. As the child is taught by activities rather than by precept, the virtues of our civilization are not strengthened in the child because virtue is "preachy" teaching, which these educators avoid. Actually, the child is left without a rudder.

President Sproul said:

". . . I believe that our American universities must take an affirmative attitude toward the basic American value of responsible freedom. They must be the chief protagonists of our civilization, aggressive in their defense of our traditions, and vigorous in their opposition to those who would destroy them."

It may be fascinating fun for the rich to be so liberal that they pave the way for the Communists, but it does not make sense. And most of the ladies in these woman's clubs are, in their own affairs, very sensible.

Bars To A Ticket

Chief Justice Vinson could hardly make a public show of interest in the next Democratic nomination for President, even if he were disposed to go after it, but latest advices from Washington are that he would decline to be the candidate if asked by Mr. Truman or later by the Democratic convention.

Among the reasons cited are Vinson's friendship for Vice President Barkley, a fellow Kentuckian who has shown a lively interest in continuing in his present office, and the constitutional bar to candidates from the same state running for President and Vice President on the same ticket.

All the Constitution says on this point is that the presidential electors shall vote by ballot "for President and Vice President one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves." Is Vinson or Barkley now an "inhabitant" of Kentucky? If so, and a Vinson-Barkley ticket carried the state in 1952, Kentucky could not cast its votes in the electoral college. Electoral votes of the other 47 states would not be affected.

A more potent reason for not putting both Vinson and Barkley on the same ticket is the rule of national politics that at least one of the candidates should come from a state with a large number of electoral votes. Eighteen states at present have more of these than Kentucky's 10. (The top five are New York, Pennsylvania, California, Illinois and Ohio.) Kentucky is down one from 1948 when Barkley shared the ticket with Truman.

Excepting Lincoln, who was born in Kentucky, but lived in Illinois at the time of his nomination, the last pre-Barkley Kentuckian to have a place on a major party presidential ticket was John C. Breckenridge who was elected vice president in 1856.

States Of Emergency

The American youth who comes of age and casts his first ballot in 1952 will have spent the greater part of his adolescence under conditions of national emergency. The latest formal state of emergency will be one year old on Sunday. It was proclaimed by President Truman after the Chinese Reds had intervened in Korea, and when MacArthur's forces were in retreat from the Yalu.

Truman followed the example set by President Roosevelt in 1941 by announcing the state of emergency in a fireside chat. On May 27, 1941, when Britain was fighting alone against the dictators, FDR told the country by radio: "We will not accept a Hitler dominated world. . . . I have tonight issued a proclamation that an unlimited state of national emergency exists."

It was necessary to use the word "unlimited" because on September 8, 1939, one week after the outbreak of the war in Europe, Roosevelt had declared a "limited" state of emergency which was still in effect. The main purpose of the 1939 proclamation was to suspend provisions of an old anti-deficit law and allow spending in excess of congressional appropriations for the armed services.

The new voter in 1952 will not remember the bank closings ordered March 6, 1933, within 48 hours of FDR's inauguration. The 1933 banking emergency did not last as long, but brought more immediate and acute repercussions than did the national emergencies proclaimed in 1939, 1941 or 1950.

Music, At 109

If there be such in Europe (there are in Russia) who are inclined to sneer at American culture, announcement that the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra will give its 5,000th concert, in Carnegie Hall on December 13, should give pause. At age 109, the New York orchestra is the third oldest of its kind in the world.

Oldest is the Philharmonic of London, founded in 1813. But the Vienna Philharmonic, second oldest, began its career a mere 11 days before the New York Philharmonic gave its first concert on December 7, 1842. That was at the Apollo Rooms, which stood on the east side of Broadway between Walker and Canal Streets. The orchestra began playing in Carnegie Hall in the season of 1892-93 and has been there since.

Heard on the commemorative 5,000th program will be two compositions given at the first concert—Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and New Overture in D by the Bohemian composer, Johann Wenzeslaus Kalliwoda. In recognition of the fact that Felix Mendelssohn was elected an honorary member of the Philharmonic-Symphony Society in 1846, the orchestra will also play the intermezzo and scherzo from "Midsummer Night's Dream," played during the first season.

At 109 years of age, the Philharmonic orchestra is a robust organization of the highest musical standards and repute.

Million Dollar Scandal

"Swartwoutism" is a useful word that has dropped out of the American language. To our grandfathers and great grandfathers it meant thievery in public office. Sam Swartwout, Tammany politician and close adviser to President Jackson, is the only man who ever succeeded in appropriating to his own uses $1,000,000 of federal funds.

As a reward for past political services Swartwout was appointed by Jackson in 1828 as collector of the Port of New York, then the richest public office in the gift of the national administration. He was continued in that post by Van Buren but fled to Europe in 1838 when shortages were found in his accounts. A congressional investigation disclosed that he had used customs collections to speculate in lands, canals and railways, generally on the losing side.

In 1839, Representative Duncan, a Whig from Ohio, gave currency to a term still in popular use when he castigated the "committee to whitewash the black frauds and corrupt practices of Swartwout."

The forgotten term "Swartwoutism" may have some application to current scandals, but the remembered term "whitewash" can hardly be applied to this year's investigations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and the tax division of the Justice Department.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

The Educated Diabetic

There is no substitute for knowledge, especially when it concerns the management of an illness. We refer to a thorough understanding rather than to the proverbial "little knowledge" that is so dangerous. In some conditions the less the patient knows, the better. But in others such as diabetes, the situation is reversed.

ledge, there are no schools for the rather than curable, the individual must contend with it for life and it is just plain horsesense for him to find out everything he can about his ailment. Although to my knowledge, there ars no schools for the layman where diabetic management is taught, the subject is just as important to the victim as learning to read, add, or subtract.

Important considerations are diet, insulin, and the care of the body. Dietetics is a science in itself and unless the diabetic is started on the right path he is likely to have difficulty selecting the proper food and an adequate variety. Food values often are misunderstood. Physicians hear such remarks as, "I always eat whole wheat bread instead of white bread or potatoes." Actually there is little difference in the carbohydrate content of white and whole wheat bread and the latter contains three times as much of the substance as does potatoes. "I use honey instead of sugar for baking cakes," the housewife may say, not realizing that honey is 85 per cent "sugar" and 15 per cent water.

The best plan is to consult a dietitian initially. She interprets the physician's dietary instructions on the number of grams of fat, carbohydrate, and protein permitted and puts them into practical form such as teaspoons, cupfuls, or grains. The menus are planned and a list of substitutes is worked out. The dietitian suggests reading material that will offer more detailed understanding of foods. (We also have a list of books on diabetes that can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope.) Once information along this line is digested it becomes a simple matter to incorporate new foods into the menus, thereby supplying a variety without affecting the malady.

Not all diabetics require insulin but those who do should learn how to give their own injections. This includes the care of the needle and syringe, how to measure the exact dose, cleanse the skin, and insert the needle. Poise and practice are required and the job should not be relegated to someone else. After all, the patient may be caught short some time if he is away from the person who gives him the hypos.

The diabetic who understands his disease has a high respect for insulin. He realizes that too little will not solve his problem and too much will throw him into shock. As a result, he rarely alters the dose without consulting his physician. Furthermore, he is acquainted with the need for testing the urine daily or several times a week. The disorder is under good control when the diet is adequate and the urine sugar free. The diabetic's education is lacking if he does not know how to take care of the feet. An infected toe may prove a costly affair not only in medical fees but in disability, suffering, and anxiety. This is one of the penalties of the disease and every precaution must be taken to prevent bruises and cracking of the skin. Proper shoes and hose also play a role.

TOMORROW: Dr. Van Dellen discusses soil nutrients that aid human nutrition.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Mystery Man Grunewald Covers Tracks Well; Wields Powerful Influence With Government High-Ups! Senator Reluctant To Investigate Five-Percenter

WASHINGTON — Henry Grunewald, king of the five-percenters, has known more important people, fixed more interesting influence deals, yet kept out of the limelight —until recently—than almost anyone else in Washington. He has had his finger in all sorts of government pie—from income taxes and war surplus to alien property and defense contracts. Yet no one knows much about him.

Almost two years ago, this columnist learned that Grunewald had arranged to tap Howard Hughes' telephone wire for Senator Brewster and Pan American World Airways at a time when Pan Am wanted to buy Howard Hughes' Trans World Airlines.

Later, I was able to turn over certain evidence to Senator Matt Neely (D. W. Va.), chairman of the District of Columbia Committee, which resulted in a Senate investigation.

However, getting the evidence on the elusive Mr. Grunewald, sometimes called "The Dutchman," was like tracking down a will-o'-the-wisp.

The investigation of Grunewald started by consulting the telephone book. He had a number in the Munsey Building, but that phone led to the law offices of one Ed Martin. Significantly, he later turned out to be the same Ed Martin who fronted for a New York corporation formed overnight to get a cut of a huge purchase of Chinese Nationalist gasoline. This mysterious deal was blocked when "commissions" were suspected.

Attorney Martin, when queried about Grunewald, explained that he had inherited the office space from Henry but neglected to notify the phone company. The minute the column representative stepped outside the door, however, Martin picked up the phone, called Senator Bridges' office, and tersely reported: "A guy named Anderson was here asking about Henry."

Later, it developed that Martin was actually on Grunewald's payroll.

Grunewald's Mystery Suite

Next lead was that Grunewald occupied a suite on the fourth floor of the Washington Hotel. Investigation revealed that he used the suite as an office. However, it was strangely registered under the name of Henry Woodring, former secretary of war. Queried by phone, in Topeka, Kansas, Woodring explained that he and Grunewald had once used the suite together on a business deal and that Grunewald must have neglected to change the hotel records.

A tip from a hotel bellboy developed the fact that Grunewald was also chummy with another guest on the fourth floor of the Washington Hotel — Dan Bolich, then No. 2 man in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Bolich was a free spender around the hotel, probably spending more than a government salary permitted. He had been seen in the company of New York underworld boss Frankie Costello.

Further research developed that Grunewald had many addresses in addition to his Munsey Building phone number and Washington Hotel headquarters. He also kept an apartment at Washington's fashionable Westchester, where he had two private phone numbers—Woodley 5700 and Sterling 2158—though he usually called from a phone booth in the Westchester lobby—Woodley 9705.

He also owned $75,000 homes in Miami, Fla., and Spring Lake, N. J. Deputy Commissioner Bolich also had a summer home at the latter place. For commuting purposes, Grunewald owned a fleet of at least three limousines.

Senator Brewster's Friend

As we delved deeper into the wire-top story, we learned that Grunewald had the habit of visiting Senator Brewster once or twice a week and that they called each other by first names. We also were able to prove that Brewster paid the expenses of Grunewald's wire-tapping friend, Lt. Joe Shimon of the Washington police force, while he was listening in on Howard Hughes's private telephone conversations.

Senate Feeble Probe

Meanwhile, Senator Neely appointed Senator Claude Pepper of Florida as chairman of a subcommittee to probe the Grunewald-Shimon-Brewster wire-tapping. But when this column placed the evidence before Senator Pepper, including Grunewald's activities, Pepper remarked:

"Is Henry mixed up in this?"

Shortly thereafter, Pepper seemed to lose interest in the investigation and took a round-the-world trip with Senator Brewster, the man he was supposed to investigate.

Meanwhile, my curiosity about Grunewald was heightened by the discovery that he had been mixed up in a black-market liquor deal. This had been investigated by the Alcohol Tax Unit, but Grunewald's part in it was never made public.

Many High Friends

Significantly, the Alcohol Tax Unit is under the direct control of the Internal Revenue Bureau. And a little probing as to why nothing had been done about Grunewald and his black market case revealed the interesting fact that he was a bosom friend of three key men in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Not only was he a friend of Deputy Commissioner Bolish, but of Commissioner George Schoeneman and General Counsel Charlie Oliphant.

MERRY GO ROUND—GAL TWO

Both Schoeneman and Oliphant had spent vacations at Grunewald's swank home at Miami Beach. Schoeneman also dropped around for spaghetti dinners at Grunewald's apartment in the Westchester.

Interviewing Oliphant about his friendship with Grunewald brought forth scant information.

"He is a friend of the family," Oliphant explained.

"Is he also a friend of the family of Schoeneman and Bolich?"

Oliphant admitted that all three knew him, that Schoeneman and himself had visited Grunewald's Miami home.

"Did you know that Grunewald was investigated by the Alcohol Tax Unit in connection with a black market case? Did you know Grunewald had a reputation around town for fixing tax cases?"

To both questions, Oliphant replied: "No."

"What is Grunewald's business?"

"I have no idea," shrugged Oliphant.

It was suggested to Oliphant that it seemed strange for a man in his position to accept the hospitality of a man without even knowing his business. He made no comment.

"The Dutchman" is also a caller at the office of Vice President Barkley and twice has turned up at dinners with Jess Larson, former head of the War Assets Administration, now head of General Services. In each case, Larson said he was invited to Fordham University dinners by Grunewald's lawyer, Ed Martin. When he got to the dinner, Grunewald was conspicuously present and even sat next to him.

Larson said he found the rumor was spreading that Grunewald was the best intermediary to handle surplus property deals, so he turned down an invitation to golf with him and a "group of senators," and tried to steer clear of Grunewald in the future.

After the Dutchman learned that I was investigating him, he started an investiation of me. I am still waiting to see what, if anything, he turned up.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—Sometimes the dark clouds of gloom have their silver lining and soon reveal their own rays of hope. It is too early as yet to say that a housecleaning of the most far-reaching nature is in prospect in Washington, but the signs point to something more drastic than the government here has witnessed in decades of history.

For what is happening is a breakdown in morals that has been confined to no political party or administration—a sort of creeping paralysis that has had its origin in the Jacksonian motto: "To the victor belong the spoils."

For what's wrong with official Washington is politics—the materialistic philosophy that governmental authority is political power and that special privilege is one of the normal and natural attributes of governmental discretion.

Facing Major Crisis

What's happened really is that centralized government is face to face with its first major crisis in 50 years. The trend toward control of everything in Washington has made the states and counties and cities less and less important as the federal government has collected and disbursed most of the money. With big taxes has come big expenditures and hence big power of discretion in spending and in administration laws.

The Republicans who held power for many years came a cropper under this system. They betrayed their trust by dispensing favors to large corporations and to the special interests which had contributed most heavily to campaign funds.

When the Democrats came in crying a "new deal," the country was led to believe—through FDR's inaugural address, for example — that the "money-changers had to be driven from the temple." Here at last — the people thought—was a reform administration with all the virtues necessary for a new era. Gradually materialism began to eat its way into officialdom. The Works Progress Administration and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration were used to win the 1936 election, and many government departments which disbursed federal money used their power and influence to help win the 1940 election. Under the Roosevelt administration, the doctrine that the "end justifies the means" became the paramount approach. It became the custom to argue that, after all, the other party was much worse. Once an important federal official testified before a congressional committee that he had violated a law because he thought the objective was good. Later on he was promoted by Mr. Roosevelt to a higher post.

For years now political influence has been gnawing inside government. Many honest-minded officials who never profited a nickel themselves, and would not tolerate any illegal use of public money, have nevertheless dispensed political favors out of which privileged citizens made money.

President Truman came into office with a long background of experience in a Kansas City political machine. He believed in the Jacksonian philosophy of party politics. He made no bones about it. So did Warren Harding, a Republican President from 1920 to 1923. Now the day of reckoning has come. The political route has been exposed to be the route of corruption and malfeasance on the part of several of Mr. Truman's appointees.

Record Is Issue

Mr. Truman is not the kind of man who believes ill of his friends and political cronies. But his record in history is now the real issue. Can he prosecute as vigorously as the country demands? Will he let the chips fall where they may? Will he clean up his own administration and set an example for all time?

NATO—How Long?

By MARK SULLIVAN

A part of the Administration's foreign policy, especially important and intently discussed just now, is commonly spoken of as "strengthening Western Europe." The official term for the institution through which this policy is carried out is North Atlantic Treaty Organization. About this and various institutions and functions associated with it, most of what the public learns is fragments or facets—an extract from a speech, a summary of a meeting. So complex and widely ramified is NATO that news channels crowded with many matters can do little more.

The project is that five Western European countries — France, Italy, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg—form a united army under one over-all command, having the same uniform, using the same arms and in general a single army. Parallel with the projected unity army is a project looking toward economic and, in one degree or another, political unity. The five countries would become in several respects one, a kind of United States of Western Europe.

From the point of view of the United States there is good reason for approval of the projected union of five Western European countries; it is an essential part of our foreign policy. Indeed, during several decades a United States of Europe has been proposed from time to time, as an ideal and as politically and economically necessary; among others, Prime Minister Churchill of Britain has advocated it.

Mistrust An Obstacle

As steps are taken to make the projected union actual, obstacles intervene. The ministers of the separate countries meet, as at Rome recently, and approve the project. Then they return to their respective countries and there encounter oppositions inherent in independence, tradition and national institutions. An over-all obstacle is that the five countries for which union is projected have different languages. A variation of the projected union is that Western Germany be included, and this creates additional obstacles. Between Germany and France there is long-standing hostility or suspicion. It was expected or hoped that Britain would adhere to the projected union, but the British government says that while it will co-operate it will not join.

Throughout discussions of the projected five-nation European army of the 12 nation NATO as a whole, there is a common characteristic which is a direct concern of the United States. This is an assumption that whatever is done about the projected European army or NATO as a whole the United States must provide more arms and more economic aid. Here we are obliged to consider how much more we can give, either of arms or of economic aid or both.

This must be estimated in connection with other problems. Currently there are contradictory view from authoritative sources about the degree to which our program for producing armament has progressed. There is another contradiction about the extent to which it is possible or practicable to turn the country's economy to production of materials for war. Also in considering how much we can send to Western European countries we must consider what we may need to send to Korea.

U. S. Could Collapse

It is not merely quantity that must be considered, it is also cost. With each day of rising prices and inflation, production of armament costs more. It is tenable to estimate that at our present pace of production of armament, and at the pace at which rising prices and inflation have gone on since the outbreak in Korea a year and a half ago, continuation for three years more would bring the United States to economic collapse. And it is a practically accepted assumption that economic collapse of the United States would mean loss of the world struggle against Russian Communism as surely as any military effort that Russia is likely to attempt.

It is very probable that Congress will not be willing to continue appropriations for economic help to the countries of Western Europe in quantities as large as Congress has been appropriating during nearly five years past. It is probable there will be some reduction. At the same time the policy of strengthening Western Europe economically and militarily will continue. The problem is to arrive at a balance between what we can give without incurring economic collapse fatal to us and Western Europe alike, and what the present condition of the economies of Western European countries can provide.

These Days

Who Should Teach

Nearly every town has its woman's club and if I refer especially to the one in Scarsdale, New York, it is only because they have projected themselves into the controversy over American education. They objected to Rabbi Benjamin Schultz lecturing on schools and the Communist invasion of our schools without the other side being presented at the same meeting. How can there be another side to this question?

President Robert G. Sproul, of the University of California, put this issue in these words:

"Historically, Americans have taken their freedom for granted. In recent years, we have learned taht we were wrong — that freedom is always vulnerable. We have learned, too, that we were wrong — that freedom is always vulnerable. We have learned that we were wrong — kind of freedom is seriously threatened by the power philosophy of that international conspiracy mislabeled as the Communist party — a philosophy that sterilizes the minds and distorts the morals of men, that sets class against class, brother against brother, and man against God. If this philosophy were confined to one nation, or even to a group of nations, and practiced only within their borders, it might be of little more than academic concern to us. The fact is, that the philosophy is being used as the basis of a power and propaganda drive for the creation of police states and the establishment by any means, including violence, of a new science of economics and a new form of society. . ."

As the level on which this work of the devil starts is the kindergarten and as it is carried through the entire life of our nation, it becomes increasingly important to study the schools to which we entrust our children, the textbooks they use, the methods that are employed to weaken character, lessen their bonds to tradition, and divorce them from faith in God and love for country.

I read the year-book of the Scarsdale Woman's Club and find a commendable organization serving the community in many aspects. Scarsdale is one of those bedroom suburbs of New York City where those who can afford to work in the big city and enjoy suburban life, buy their own homes, furnish them tastefully, carefully keep gardens and compete in homemade cuisine fancifully garnished. Such people dislike being regarded as Communists or even left-wingers. They object to their patriotism being questioned. Many vote Republican. Most think that they are liberals. Mrs. Gladys F. Carroll, president of this club, wrote this paragraph as a foreword to the report:

"This year marks the 175th anniversary of the independence of our country. It was through faith and courage that this nation was founded. The faith of our fathers is still one of our great remaining forces. Let us cherish this precious heritage."

Yet, in two recent situations, this club ranged itself on the side of ignoring the menace of the corruption of the life of our nation through Communist infiltration. It is the same puzzling phenomenon as a proposition recently made by a motion picture company, whose affairs I am investigating, that those who oppose communism in motion pictures, limit their objections to pictures made since April, 1951. Why that date? Why not any other date? If the thing is evil, does the date matter?

These puzzles require analysis. It is absurd to speak about "Park Avenue liberals" without asking why their brand of liberalism only serves the Communists but never serves those who are fighting the Communist infiltration into our schools, or even the substitution of functional training for character building.

What is called "progressive education" is not in any way associated with the Communist movement, but we must note that since its introduction into our educational system, patriotism has been weakened. As the child is taught by activities rather than by precept, the virtues of our civilization are not strengthened in the child because virtue is "preachy" teaching, which these educators avoid. Actually, the child is left without a rudder.

President Sproul said:

". . . I believe that our American universities must take an affirmative attitude toward the basic American value of responsible freedom. They must be the chief protagonists of our civilization, aggressive in their defense of our traditions, and vigorous in their opposition to those who would destroy them."

It may be fascinating fun for the rich to be so liberal that they pave the way for the Communists, but it does not make sense. And most of the ladies in these woman's clubs are, in their own affairs, very sensible.

Lunching With Emily Post

Emily Post, an old friend as well as a long-time contributor to the Bell Syndicate, invited me to have lunch with her the other day, and I accepted with alacrity and some misgivings, although thinking it was an opportunity to brush up on my manners. There were five of us, Miss Nanette Kutner, a writer, Ernest Heyn, writer, editor of the American Weekly, Mrs. Post's son, the hostess, and myself. We sat down, and two maids started to serve a delicious meal, the first course being a tasty soup. As soon as the lady at the head of the table dipped in, we all followed suit—that is except Mr. Heyn who seemed a little fidgety.

John Wheeler

"I would like to eat this soup," he said somewhat timidly, "if I only had a spoon."

Of course, he could have picked up the dish and sipped it, but I gathered later this is against the rules unless the container is a cup. Mrs. Post took her own ladle with which she had been stirring her helping, stuck it in her water glass, twirling it around, and then handed it to the guest of honor. The maid brought her another.

"I thought for a minute maybe you only had four soup spoons," I remarked.

My observation did not make any hit nor get even a smile. Anyway, now you know what to do if the table setter fails to count and you turn out to be short in the silverware department. Wash your own spoon and pass it along. After a few preliminaries, the conversation got around to etiquette, and we all listened carefully.

"There is one thing which annoys me very much," said Mrs. Post, "and that is the practice of the hostess being served first. It is ridiculous, and there is only a single excuse for it which is nonsense. It goes back to the idea the food may be poisoned, and therefore she should taste it before the others. Even if she had a Borgia in the kitchen for a cook, the arsenic would not take effect in time to save the others."

"There is another reason, mother," said her son. "If it is a big meat dish, the hostess shows the guests how to approach it."

"Anyone should know that," insisted Mrs. Post. "Once I had a Japanese here who was used to eating with chopsticks. I thought of changing my rule so she could watch me and then didn't. Everything turned out fine."

"Why didn't you give her chopsticks?" I asked.

"Not at all," she replied. "I wouldn't expect to get a knife and fork if dining at a home in Tokyo." In case you are inviting a Chinese to your home, you don't need to lay in native tools.

Mrs. Post is a dignified lady with a fine sense of humor and rightly deserves her reputation of being the foremost authority in the world on etiquette. A few years ago I was at her house for lunch with a rough-neck friend of mine named Henry Snevily, and he made it through the soup all right, but he got too dainty when it came to a lamb chop, and, instead of picking it up by the white panties, as he usually does, he was trying to catch and cut it with his little finger raised. His target skidded and slipped off the plate onto the floor. Mrs. Post didn't even miss a comma in the conversation. She pressed a button with her foot, and, when the maid responded, she said quietly:

'Bring Mr. Snevily another chop."

Glancing at the rug, she returned with a dust pan and whiskbroom and swept up the escaped morsel. She was gone a few minutes and reappeared with a chop, and to this day, I don't knew whether she brushed the first one off or had a spare in the kitchen. My friend still blushes whenever the matter is mentioned.

Another time he was escorting Mrs. Post from a visit to the editor of This Week magazine. Riding down in the elevator, she suddenly turned and said,

"Get me a taxi quick when we reach the street."

Mr. Snevily was concerned.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Don't you feel well? Are you faint?"

"Oh, no," she answered. "I'm losing my panties." Now, ladies, you know what to do under similar circumstances

When I left, I felt I had had lunch with a delightful and charming hostess, and that my manners and deportment had been improved by the experience.

Police Warn Yule Shoppers

Chief of Police R. Emmett Flynn yesterday issued a warning against thieves who prey on Christmas shoppers.

Also noting traffic congestion, he offered the following suggestions for protection:

1. Always lock your automobile when it is parked or unattended.
2. Lock packages in the trunk, or cover them so they will be out of sight.
3. Observe parking rules so others may have the opportunity of shopping.
4. Assist in traffic movement by not jamming or blocking intersections.
5. Be courteous to pedestrians and other drivers.

Although no serious cases have come to the attention of police since the Yuletide spending spree began, Chief Flynn cautioned shoppers to be on guard for pickpockets and sneak thieves.

Women, he said, should not place their pocketbooks on unattended counters while inspecting merchandise.

Avoid carrying large sums of money and be especially watchful in a crowd where a pickpocket can operate with little chance of detection, Chief Flynn advised.

Maryland Veterans Of "Bulge" To Meet

A memorial dinner and reunion will be held Sunday at 6:30 p.m. in Baltimore by the Maryland Chapter, 106th Infantry Division, to mark the seventh anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—It has been more than 19 years since Florenz Ziegfeld died out on the West Coast after a session of pleurisy and pneumonia, but a bit of mail that came across my desk this morning made me realize that even now, two decades later, the magic of the name is as strong and commanding as ever.

An enterprising press agent came up with the news that the members of the Ziegfeld club, comprising a group of girls who once appeared in the great man's Follies, had been polled on the question of what 10 beauties of this day would have been glorified by Ziegfeld if he were still alive.

The list itself is somewhat less than distinguished. It includes Dagmar, Judy Garland, June Allyson and a few others who would make me rear back cynically and say "Ennh" (will somebody tell me how to spell that wonderful expression of indifference and distaste?) A woman named Gladys Feldman Braham, president of the club, was quoted as saying that Ziegfeld would be happy today because "today's women are more glorious and alluring than ever." All these are publicity items that make fine fodder for anyone's waste basket.

But the name itself—ah, suddenly you sit back and you get the inclination to shake your head sadly and say, "They don't make them like that any more," when you remember this peculiar man who once said with a straight face that he was happy he had never catered to the baser passions of audiences in any of his shows. This is not quite true, of course. There are theatrical promoters around today who know just as well as Ziegfeld did when a woman is beautiful, and they know how to exploit her almost as skillfully. But the man was someone to reckon with, no doubt.

Ziegfeld was a turbulent, strange man. To describe him you might use Harpo Marx's words about A. Woollcott—just a great big dreamer with a good flair for double-entry bookkeeping. He could envision big, lavish extravaganzas for the stage that seemed to fit the grotesque times of the Twenties so well, but he also was practical enough to charge $22 a seat for an opening if he thought he could get away with it. He could, too.

Ziegfeld liked to wrap himself in an air of dignity and reserve, but he could break out of this cellophane occasionally and become a real fishwife. He was all the paradoxes wrapped into one. He liked prize fighting and perfume. He wore $40 silk shirts and he would eat in a rundown coffee pit if it was handy. A waiter in Billy Lahiff's old Tavern once said "He'd put up a swell squawk if he was overcharged a dime, and on his way out of the joint he'd maybe slip some scrubwoman a $20 bill."

The Chicago-born showman had a fine, lusty flair for publicity, although a great deal of this might have been the work of Bernard Sobel, a press agent. The best example of it was when he let it be known that a milkman was suing Anna Held, then appearing in his Follies—and out of that idea came the news that she bathed every morning in a tub of milk. Every over-blown, hippy, seedy - looking housewife promptly tried to save up enough milk to take at least one such bath and the dairy industry made a fortune.

I Remember with delight that once he was asked to name the 10 most beautiful women in the world, he included my own favorite, Elissa Landi, among them. Some of the others still are around—Garbo, Joan Crawford, Marion Davies—and others, like Jean Harlow and Grace Moore, are gone. He used to keep track of his beauties. Once when an interviewer asked him what became of Follies girls, he said some went into the movies, some got married, some became actresses, "and, of course, some of them go t hell."

A wonderful, elegantly inconsistent man—a man who was the first to put a nude girl on the American stage, and who later announced indignatly that he was leading a "gigantic fight to clean the revue stage of frightful nude orgies." I guess, all in all, they don't make them like that any more.

Use these six ways to save your energy when working at fever pitch on holiday preparations.

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

No matter how pressed you are for time these days, or where you may be, there is no excuse for not taking a ten-minute mid-morning and mid-afternoon break. As efficiency experts have proved, the bit of rest will renew your energy and make it possible for you not only to make quicker decisions but also to act faster with increased proficiency. You are actually working against your goal rather than toward it when you insist on driving through with no respite.

But there's an even greater reason for rest periods right now. No matter how much work you put into making the holidays fun for everyone else, if you are so nervous and tired that you're a mere shadow of your most charming self, you are actually slighting your friends and family. Your bouyant radiance is as essential to the holiday festivities as the tree!

As the pace increases, your ability to relax must increase right along with it; if it doesn't, success cannot be yours. So here's what you do:

1. Never omit the ten-minute morning and afternoon breaks. Take a glass of milk or cup of bouillon to help relax and refresh you.

2. If you're indoors, stand before an open window and take a half dozen deep breaths twice a day; then yawn and stretch. The extra oxygen will revitalize your bloodstream, and counteract the deadening effects of work, pressure, and stuffiness.

3. Never work to the point of deep fatigue; remember that work is the thing that keeps best of all. Get to bed early at the end of a hard day and the next day the unfinished mountains of work will look like foothills.

4. Instead of working late at the end of a hard day, rise earlier the next morning to tackle the task and far more will be accomplished in the same time. A pushed feeling about work eats up more energy than the work itself.

5. When a heavy - duty evening can't be avoided, take a warm bath before dinner and lie in the tub for as long as ten minutes. Follow it with a brisk rubdown and finish off with a cologne massage. You'll actually feel your muscles and nerves "unlax!"

6. To completely renew your body and outlook, lie down for as long as you can with your feet higher than your head, your eyes closed, and the dial of your mind turned to "off." You'll rise not only relaxed but stimulated!

Whenever you relax, remember you are not wasting time. You are saving the stuff that good looks and the good life are made of. That thought is one of the best relaxers of all!

But the man was someone to reckon with, no doubt.

Ziegfeld was a turbulent, strange man. To describe him you might use Harpo Marx's words about A. Woollcott—just a great big dreamer with a good flair for double-entry bookkeeping. He could envision big, lavish extravaganzas for the stage that seemed to fit the grotesque times of the Twenties so well, but he also was practical enough to charge $22 a seat for an opening if he thought he could get away with it. He could, too.

Ziegfeld liked to wrap himself in an air of dignity and reserve, but he could break out of this cellophane occasionally and become a real fishwife. He was all the paradoxes wrapped into one. He liked prize fighting and perfume. He wore $40 silk shirts and he would eat in a rundown coffee pit if it was handy. A waiter in Billy Lahiff's old Tavern once said "He'd put up a swell squawk if he was overcharged a dime, and on his way out of the joint he'd maybe slip some scrubwoman a $20 bill."

The Chicago-born showman had a fine, lusty flair for publicity, although a great deal of this might have been the work of Bernard Sobel, a press agent. The best example of it was when he let it be known that a milkman was suing Anna Held, then appearing in his Follies—and out of that idea came the news that she bathed every morning in a tub of milk. Every over-blown, hippy, seedy - looking housewife promptly tried to save up enough milk to take at least one such bath and the dairy industry made a fortune.

I Remember with delight that once he was asked to name the 10 most beautiful women in the world, he included my own favorite, Elissa Landi, among them. Some of the others still are around—Garbo, Joan Crawford, Marion Davies—and others, like Jean Harlow and Grace Moore, are gone. He used to keep track of his beauties. Once when an interviewer asked him what became of Follies girls, he said some went into the movies, some got married, some became actresses, "and, of course, some of them go t hell."

A wonderful, elegantly inconsistent man—a man who was the first to put a nude girl on the American stage, and who later announced indignatly that he was leading a "gigantic fight to clean the revue stage of frightful nude orgies." I guess, all in all, they don't make them like that any more.

Use these six ways to save your energy when working at fever pitch on holiday preparations.

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

No matter how pressed you are for time these days, or where you may be, there is no excuse for not taking a ten-minute mid-morning and mid-afternoon break. As efficiency experts have proved, the bit of rest will renew your energy and make it possible for you not only to make quicker decisions but also to act faster with increased proficiency. You are actually working against your goal rather than toward it when you insist on driving through with no respite.

But there's an even greater reason for rest periods right now. No matter how much work you put into making the holidays fun for everyone else, if you are so nervous and tired that you're a mere shadow of your most charming self, you are actually slighting your friends and family. Your bouyant radiance is as essential to the holiday festivities as the tree!

As the pace increases, your ability to relax must increase right along with it; if it doesn't, success cannot be yours. So here's what you do:

1. Never omit the ten-minute morning and afternoon breaks. Take a glass of milk or cup of bouillon to help relax and refresh you.

2. If you're indoors, stand before an open window and take a half dozen deep breaths twice a day; then yawn and stretch. The extra oxygen will revitalize your bloodstream, and counteract the deadening effects of work, pressure, and stuffiness.

3. Never work to the point of deep fatigue; remember that work is the thing that keeps best of all. Get to bed early at the end of a hard day and the next day the unfinished mountains of work will look like foothills.

4. Instead of working late at the end of a hard day, rise earlier the next morning to tackle the task and far more will be accomplished in the same time. A pushed feeling about work eats up more energy than the work itself.

5. When a heavy - duty evening can't be avoided, take a warm bath before dinner and lie in the tub for as long as ten minutes. Follow it with a brisk rubdown and finish off with a cologne massage. You'll actually feel your muscles and nerves "unlax!"

6. To completely renew your body and outlook, lie down for as long as you can with your feet higher than your head, your eyes closed, and the dial of your mind turned to "off." You'll rise not only relaxed but stimulated!

Whenever you relax, remember you are not wasting time. You are saving the stuff that good looks and the good life are made of. That thought is one of the best relaxers of all!

Tomorrow: Your letter writing ability.

"Sweating It Out" Called Best Treatmet nFor Host Of Diseases

By JACK GEIGER

CHICAGO (INS) — For prickly heat or heart disease—or a host of other ills—a New York dermatologist says the best treatment for many patients is to "sweat it out."

And the advantage of those convalescent trips to the hot, dry climates of places like Arizona, California or Texas, the specialist added, is that it is much easier to sweat there.

Dr. Marion B. Sulzberger, chairman of the Department of Dermatology of New York City's Bellevue Medical Center, advanced these theories on the basis of new discoveries that even the tiniest injuries to the sweat glands can cause serious bodily disease.

When the sweat glands are plugged or the pores of the skin are closed by disease, he explained, sweat does not escape through the skin—but the body keeps on producing sweat just the same.

This "sweat retention syndrome" can be serious because sweating has an important function—cooling the body. When the sweat system fails, the body tries to find other ways of giving off heat.

The results, Dr. Sulzberger said, may be like the effects of running an automobile with a broken radiator.

The patient with "sweat retention syndrome" won't boil over. But he may develop prickly heat, nearly incurable eruptions of the skin of the hands and feet, unbearable itching, and shortness of breath.

During humid, hot weather he may develop dizziness, nausea, palpitation, heart disease, and disturbances of the blood pressure.

Because the skin and lungs are overburdened by the job of dissipating body heat, the sweat retention syndome may play a role in sinus infections, asthma, and even arthritis.

Dr. Sulzberger told the American Academy of Dermatology's annual convention in Chicago that "the long recognized effects of dry, warm climates and low barometric pressures, combined with rest and wearing of little clothing, may in great measure be explained by the facilitation of the evaporation of fluid from the surfaces of the body"—in other words, by the greater ease in sweating. He added:

"At present, perhaps the only successful therapeutic approach for the many patients of this kind is a transfer to places with climates such as exist in desert areas of Arizona, Texas, California, Egypt and Palestine."

The skin specialist appealed for further research on the effects of sweating, using "climatized rooms with deliberately produced fluctuations of heat, humidity, pressure and air movement."

State Board Meets Today

Allegany county will be represented at the meeting of the State Association of County Commissioners in Annapolis today by two members of the Board of County Commissioners, their attorney and clerk.

Commissioners William H. Lemmert and James Holmes, Gorman E. Getty, attorney to the board, and James G. Stevenson, board clerk will attend. Accompanying the county officials will be Horace P. Whitworth, Jr., a member of the Allegany county delegation to the legislature. Whitworth is attending to hear legislative proposals by the commissioners of the various counties.

Among items to be discussed by the state group will be salary increases for school teachers, assessments, various tax problems and road projects.

The all day session is scheduled for Carvel Hall.

Somerville Nicholson, supervisor of assessments for Allegany county, will sit in on some of the sessions and he will also attend a meeting of the executive board of the Maryland Assessing Officers Association later in Baltimore.

The Sargossa Sea refers to the central area of the North Atlantic Ocean roughly between the West Indies and the Azores. In this area is the relatively warm central core of water around which moves the great eddy caused by the Gulf Stream and other currents.

Probe Pending In Garrett Case

State Police of the LaVale barracks were unable Monday to question Charles Bohn, 33-year-old Frederick grocer who suffered a mysterious head injury December 3 in Garrett county.

Trooper John F. Browning said he received word Bohn, who is in serious condition at University Hospital, Baltimore, can not be interrogated until Thursday.

Friends accompanying Bohn to Oakland on a hunting expedition the day before he was hurt will be quizzed Friday by Garrett County State's Attorney Dwight Stover.

Baltimore doctors said Bohn told them he was hit and robbed. However, he has not been able to give a coherent story.

Bohn was found lying on the sidewalk outside of Ward Hinebaugh's restaurant in Oakland. He was examined at Garrett County Memorial Hospital on two occasions and then referred to the Baltimore hospital for further examination.

Governor Raps Demo Critics

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11 (AP)—Gov. McKeldin accused three Democratic critics tonight of trying "to shatter any hope" for tax relief.

In an address prepared for television delivery, the governor chastised House Speaker Luber (D-Balto 5th), Majority Leader Boone (D-Baltimore County) and Delegate Robinson (D-Balto 4th) for charging him with deceit in a budget transfer last winter.

He singled out Robinson as author of the statement "in which he obediently was joined" by the others.

The three delegates last week charged McKeldin with "deceit" and said he demonstrated a "callous disregard for the state road building program" when he fostered successfully a plan to finance state police with highway revenues.

Four Navy Fliers Killed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Navy announced tonight that four men were killed today in the crash of a Navy PBY while landing at Hamilton, Bermuda.

Burglars Charge Tools To Victim

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 11 (AP)—Bowling Alley Proprietor Ted Sieler's safe was cracked and robbed of $600 on Nov. 26.

Today he got a bill for the burglar's tools found by police at the scene.

Checking a department store's invoice, Sieler found each tool listed and charged to him had been used to open his strong box.

Two Teen-Agers Held For Draft Office Entry

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11 (AP)—The FBI announced here today it had arrested two teen-agers from Chevy Chase, Md., for breaking into the Selective Service office at Bethesda, on the northwest edge of Washington.

Charged with stealing three typewriters and about 100 blank Selective Service registration cards were: William George Connor, 17, and Roger Hensel Young, 18-year-old father.

The FBI said they had been selling the draft board cards for $1 to $3 to other youngsters. The cards, when made out to show the holder's age as more than 18, are handy for buying beer in Washington.

McKeldin Won't Let Magistrate Give Up Duties

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11 (AP) — Gov. McKeldin today refused to accept Magistrate Avrum K. Rifman's offer to resign.

The governor based his action on a recommendation of the executive committee of the Bar Association of Baltimore City. The governor said he was asking Rifman to resume his duties "at once."

Another report, issued by the association's judiciary committee, took the position that the governor should accept Rifman's resignation because of possible public "suspicion and distrust."

The investigation by the association was based upon Rifman's business associations with George Goldberg, who refused on the grounds of possible self incrimination to answer questions of a Senate Crime Committee investigating gambling.

The executive committee overrode the judiciary committee's conclusions. The executive committee report, issued Sunday through William D. MacMillan, president of the bar association, found no question as to the "honesty and integrity" of Rifman.

They also found "no evidence" of Goldberg being engaged in illegal dealings.

In his statement that he was refusing Rifman's resignation, McKeldin attacked the Baltimore Sunpapers which he said "published the article that led Mr. Rifman to tender his resignation."

Spaak Steps Down, Wins Assembly Fight

STRASBOURG, France, Dec. 11 (AP)—Paul-Henri Spaak, Belgium's former socialist premier, won a dramatic floor fight in the European Consultative Assembly tonight for a stronger Council of Europe to wield executive authority over a unified European army.

He resigned earlier as president of the assembly in protest against what he called a "timid" resolution which plumped for restricted international political control of the projected defense force.

Then he went into action as a rank and file delegate to back a motion by Pierre-Henri Teitgen of France to amend the council's basic statute.

Spaak's victory was by a narrow three-vote margin on the Teitgen motion to amend the council's basic statute and authorize the committee of ministers to appoint "high commissioners" to direct joint agencies —such as the army or the Schuman coal and steel pool—which may be established by all or some of the member states.

Nova Scotia Girls' Note On Yule Tree Reaches Hagerstown "Santa"

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Dec. 11 (AP) —Two little girls from Nova Scotia, Canada, will get Christmas presents this year because of a note on a Christmas tree their father cut down.

The tree, delivered to a fruit market here this week, bore a note from Boneta Naugler, 2½, and Heldn Haugler, 1½, of Italy Cross, Lunenburg Count, N. S.

The note, written by an elder sister, said the girls "haven't any warm clothes, and toys are something we have never seen. Our daddy can't buy them, because the money he makes must go for food and cod liver oil."

Consequently, they said they don't expect a visit from Santa Claus this year.

Victor Stotler, operator of the fruit market, spotted the note in a shipment of 300 trees and immediately started taking a collection in the neighborhood. A large box of warm clothes and toys is on its way by air to the little girls.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 11 (AP)—Gov. McKeldin said today he will take up Chairman Arthur H. Brice's absence from Board of Natural Resources meetings with the chairman himself.

The two may confer tomorrow. Brice, nudged yesterday by the board for failing to attend sessions since last July, said he wanted to see the governor anyway about Tidewater Fisheries Commission affairs.

And Brice laid his absence from board meetings to pressure of tidewater business.

"I have been doing what I thought was the most important thing and will do so until the governor tells me not to," Brice said.

Governor Raps Demo Critics

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11 (AP)—Gov. McKeldin accused three Democratic critics tonight of trying "to shatter any hope" for tax relief.

In an address prepared for television delivery, the governor chastised House Speaker Luber (D-Balto 5th), Majority Leader Boone (D-Baltimore County) and Delegate Robinson (D-Balto 4th) for charging him with deceit in a budget transfer last winter.

He singled out Robinson as author of the statement "in which he obediently was joined" by the others.

The three delegates last week charged McKeldin with "deceit" and said he demonstrated a "callous disregard for the state road building program" when he fostered successfully a plan to finance state police with highway revenues.

Four Navy Fliers Killed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Navy announced tonight that four men were killed today in the crash of a Navy PBY while landing at Hamilton, Bermuda.

Burglars Charge Tools To Victim

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 11 (AP)—Bowling Alley Proprietor Ted Sieler's safe was cracked and robbed of $600 on Nov. 26.

Today he got a bill for the burglar's tools found by police at the scene.

Checking a department store's invoice, Sieler found each tool listed and charged to him had been used to open his strong box.

Two Teen-Agers Held For Draft Office Entry

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11 (AP)—The FBI announced here today it had arrested two teen-agers from Chevy Chase, Md., for breaking into the Selective Service office at Bethesda, on the northwest edge of Washington.

Charged with stealing three typewriters and about 100 blank Selective Service registration cards were: William George Connor, 17, and Roger Hensel Young, 18-year-old father.

The FBI said they had been selling the draft board cards for $1 to $3 to other youngsters. The cards, when made out to show the holder's age as more than 18, are handy for buying beer in Washington.

McKeldin Won't Let Magistrate Give Up Duties

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11 (AP) — Gov. McKeldin today refused to accept Magistrate Avrum K. Rifman's offer to resign.

The governor based his action on a recommendation of the executive committee of the Bar Association of Baltimore City. The governor said he was asking Rifman to resume his duties "at once."

Another report, issued by the association's judiciary committee, took the position that the governor should accept Rifman's resignation because of possible public "suspicion and distrust."

The investigation by the association was based upon Rifman's business associations with George Goldberg, who refused on the grounds of possible self incrimination to answer questions of a Senate Crime Committee investigating gambling.

The executive committee overrode the judiciary committee's conclusions. The executive committee report, issued Sunday through William D. MacMillan, president of the bar association, found no question as to the "honesty and integrity" of Rifman.

They also found "no evidence" of Goldberg being engaged in illegal dealings.

In his statement that he was refusing Rifman's resignation, McKeldin attacked the Baltimore Sunpapers which he said "published the article that led Mr. Rifman to tender his resignation."

Fire Protection Is Termed Adequate In North End

North End residents were told Monday the area has fire protection comparable to any section in town.

The statement was made by Fire Department officials at a meeting of the group and members of the Mayor and Council following Monday's regular session in the office of Mayor Thomas S. Post.

Fire Chief Virgil A. Parker and Commissioner of Police and Fire John J. Long described methods by which the Fire Department operates in North End in event of an emergency.

They said tests have shown there is a sufficient volume of water in hydrants to allow the department to fight any fire there with the use of its booster pumps.

The only bottleneck would be if mechanical failure developed in Fire Department equipment. But this is considered unlikely, Chief Parker said, since 11 pumps are available for North End.

Long and Parker made a study of the area from Maplewood Lane to Roxbury Avenue, the farthest point of the residential section.

Fastest Growing Section

They said it is "the fastest growing residential section" in the city with 85 houses valued at approximately $595,000.

About two weeks ago, Long told the group, he, Chief Parker and Simon K. Carroll, Water Department official, went to the area and Long asked what would happen in case of fire. To find out, he decided to stage a test and pulled the alarm box at the corner of Edgewood Drive and Holland Street.

Within four and one-half minutes a truck was at the box and within five was at the hydrant at the corner of Trost and Piedmont Avenues, Long said. Seven minutes later, firemen had hose connections made, a total of 12 minutes since the call to East Side fire station until fire-fighting equipment was ready.

Sufficient Pressure

With the aid of the pumper which was generating 120 pounds engine pressure, 80 pounds of water pressure was measured at the hose nozzle. Chief Parker said it took three men to hold the hose at that pressure and there was sufficient to have two more lines in operation.

The chief said there is sufficient water volume in the section to give good fire protection and added "we have seen it ourselves."

East Side is responsible for calls to that section, the chief said, including a few homes which are a couple of feet outside the city line. East Side is to hook up its pump immediately in event of such an emergency, he said, and if help is needed other companies will be ready to respond.

Also approached at the meeting was the question of inadequite pressure for some homes in the higher portion of North End.

Water Commissioner George H. Tederick said Carroll and Water Department employes have been directed to make pressure tests at these homes.

The tests are expected to be made this week.

State Deer Kill Will Go Higher

The record deer kill in Maryland will go even higher when a 10-day season begins next Saturday on private grounds in Washington county.

Ernest A. Vaughn, director of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, estimates the total will be 10 to 35 above the 1,177 legal kills recorded so far. Of these, six were bagged by archers during a special season early last month in Harford and Baltimore counties.

Hunters in Garrett county killed a record of 566 bucks out of the 1,171 taken during last week's shooting.

Other counties reported: Allegany 207, Worcester 113, Washington 99, Cecil 73, Frederick 70, Dorchester 21, Kent 19, Somerset 2 and Wicomico, one.

There were no fatalities among hunters but a few reports of injuries.

Allen Formally Files For Sixth District Seat

W. Prescott Allen, Montgomery county newspaper publisher, Monday filed his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress in Maryland's Sixth District.

Allen, who announced on November 8 he intended to seek the congressional seat, became the first Democratic candidate to file. He filed his papers with John R. Reeves, secretary of state for Maryland, at Reeves' office in Bethesda.

Reeves, who is a neighbor of Allen's, has indicated he may be a candidate for the same office—on the Republican ticket, however.

Allen carried Garrett, Allegany and Frederick counties but lost Washington and Montgomery counties and the nomination to Gen. Russell P. Hartle. Gen. Hartle later was defeated by Rep. J. Glenn Beall in the general election.

"The Great A-Bomb Robbery"

By BOB CONSIDINE

(World Copyright 1951 by INS)

"An hour of more momentous significance to the U. S. S. R. than Stalingrad or the defense of Moscow." Thus does Bob Considine, in the following article, describe the meeting of two insignificant men on a New York suburban street in 1944. This is the fourth of 11 articles telling how Russia stole the secrets that enabled her to make atomic bombs.

Many of the world's foremost woes and fears date from an inconspicuous meeting of two humble-looking intellectuals on a seamy street in suburban Woodside, N. Y., one evening early in 1944.

From one direction strolled a roundish, flabby little Philadelphia chemist named Harry Gold. Under an arm he carried a green-bound book. If there was anything unusual about him it was the pair of gloves rolled tightly in his right hand, like a chubby baton.

From the opposite direction walked a pale wiry man in his late 30's, blinking solemnly behind his horn-rimmed glasses. His clothes were of the stiffly imaginativeless goods of wartime England, but on the street which he now trod—to the eventual despair of all free men—he melded into the air of shabby gentility. In his hand he carried, half-concealed, a tennis ball.

The symbols of recognition being unmistakable, both men paused.

"I'm Raymond," Harry Gold, a document-running courier for the Communist spy apparatus for the previous ten years, whispered.

The other man, faintly aloof as he studied Gold, said clearly, "I am Dr. Klaus Fuchs." He walked on with Gold (whom he was to know only as "Raymond") at his side.

Fuchs' Path Devious One

It was an hour of more momentous significance to the U. S. S. R. than Stalingrad, or the defense of Moscow. From that hour and that meeting—the culmination of fantastic intrigue—the Kremlin could move firmly toward the creation of an atomic stockpile which emboldened it to make its stupendous post-war aggressions against the free world.

Fuchs' path to that infamous meeting place had been a devious one. It was a path marked by milestones as obscure as campus riots at Kiel University in Germany to marking posts as distinct as mighty agreements reached by Roosevelt and Churchill at Quebec a year before.

Fuchs, at that meeting, had behind him a life which will be studied for generations to come by psychologists, psychiatrists and criminologists—for his own subsequent confessions, six years later, appear too juvenile to shed serious light on the events which motivated one of history's top crimes.

He was raised in a pious atmosphere and happy family. His father, a well-liked extrovert, was a Lutheran pastor who became a Quaker. Klaus, the youngest child, was showered with attention. Behind the meekest demeanor, and in a sickly body, he developed a curious superiority complex. But no one denied, first at Leipzig University and later at Kiel, where his father was professor of religious science, that Klaus was not only bright but brave.

Worked For Hitler Party

He joined a Communist youth organization and, in the early 1930's, agitated openly in behalf of Hitler's Nazi Party. It was his first brush with intrigue on the grand scale. German Communists, it is generally forgotten, were strongly pro-Hitler on the ground that he and his party had the best chance of unseating the Weimar Republic—after which the Communists would take over from the Nazis as the parent party had seized Russia from the moderate Kerensky government.

Hitler, of course, out-intrigued the German Communist plot by burning the Reichstag and commencing his purge of the Reds on the ground that they were the arsonists.

Fuch ducked underground and became a cog in a Communist group dedicated to protecting key workers from Hitler's wrath. But after a time he was ordered to leave the country in order to complete his schooling—against the day when Germany would become a Communist country and scientific Reds would be needed.

In Britain he shone at Bristol University (doctorate of philosophy in mathematics and physics) and at Edinburgh University (doctorate of science). The Carnegie Foundation awarded him a research fellowship. When war broke out he was interned and sent to Canada, along with many other enemy aliens. There he is chiefly remembered as one who constantly complained because his keepers would not supply him with newspapers. More subtly he formed a violent hatred of Britain for interning him—a known loather of Hitlerism.

Returned To England In 1942

By 1942 he was back in England and had accepted a teaching post at the University of Glasgow. In June of that year he was assigned to secret atomic work, became naturalized, took the solemn security oath, and made immediate contact with a Communist espionage ring to deliver to it such information as he could acquire. At first he turned over only his own finding and theories, then those of associates.

The hatred of the Nazis for this man was such that some time after his return to Britain Joseph Goebbels sent to British security officials, via Switzerland, a dossier on Fuchs' Communist activities in Germany as a student. But the British ignored the information, along with other dossiers sent, on the ground that it was but part of a continuing Nazi effort to "split the Allies."

Fuchs' contributions to the fund of Soviet atomic knowledge could only have been meagre during his immediately subsequent two years of work in Britain's atomic research program.

But during that period a step of tremendous portent had been taken at Quebec by the President of the United States and Prime Minister Churchill. Fuchs and the U.S.S.R. were to be two notable beneficiaries of that step.

Fuchs Welcomed To U. S.

Roosevelt and Churchill entered into a pact at Quebec whereby security officers of the Manhattan Engineering District (the a-bomb clearing house) and the F.B.I. would accept accredited British scientists and technicians — sent here from England to work—without further loyalty checks.

The British were to have full authority over their own. Of Fuchs, their security report had said, "he will never become a foreign agent." He and certain other British team members were among the few top scientists connected with the a-bomb effort who were never "tailed" by MED security police, bent not only on protecting them from possible kidnap or injury but also interested in noting their off-hours associates.

Thus Fuchs was welcomed into a land and an operation which possessed all then known about processing and refining uranium-238, extracting uranium-235 (explosive) by the gaseous diffusion and other bizarre methods, the theories relating to the construction of an atomic bomb, and other information so advanced that in all probability it has still not been shared with our closest allies.

Fuchs' arrival in this country in December, 1943, though completely unheralded so far as the American people were concerned, changed U. S. and world history for many generations to come.

Hagerstown Tops Fort Hill, Allegany And LaSalle Win

Maroons Win 39-35 Thriller At Foul Line

600 Fans See Burke And Cutshaw Star As Visitors Win Third

A preview of the battle for Class A honors in the state was witnessed last night by some 600 fans at Fort Hill when Coach Mel Henry's Hagerstown High quintet edged Fort Hill in a 39-35 thriller in the opening contest for the Sentinels. It was the third straight victory for Hagerstown.

The battle was a close, hard-fought contest all the way with the issue in doubt right up to the final minute. The score was tied no less than 11 times and changed hands on 11 other occasions.

The largest margin held by either team was a four-point edge by Fort Hill at the close of the initial quarter 11-7.

Joe DiMaggio Quits Baseball After 13 Years With Yankees

May Take Position As TV Broadcaster

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP) — Joe DiMaggio, who ranks beside Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth as one of the greatest of all ball players, announced his retirement from baseball today.

While it was not a complete surprise, the announcement came as a shock to the nation's fans who long had thrilled to the batting and fielding exploits of the brilliant New York Yankee outfielder.

DiMaggio, at a specially arranged news conference in the plush Yankee offices before newsreel and television cameras, said he never would don a baseball uniform again. He said he never had entertained managerial or coaching ambitions and probably would accept a job with the Yankee organization as a television broadcaster.

It is expected that DiMaggio, who collected $704,769.71 during 13 years playing with the club, would take the post of TV commentator of the Yankees' home baseball games. That post, left vacant when Dizzy Dean transferred to St. Louis to broadcast the Browns' games, reportedly will bring $50,000 a season.

DiMaggio, 37 years old last Nov. 25, said a series of injuries and mishaps which hampered him throughout his brilliant major league career, all of it with the Yankees, prompted his decision to quit.

"I knew I was beginning to slip as far back as three years ago," DiMag said. "The old timing was beginning to leave me and my reflexes were beginning to slow up.

DiMaggio said he knew he was going to miss the game but that he did not feel badly about that.

"Right now I feel wonderful," he said with a grin. "But I cannot forget those tortuous days and nights of agony. No, I've played my last game of ball and I have no regrets. I feel that I have reached the stage where I can no longer produce for my club, my manager, my teammates and my fans.

DiMaggio spent an hour posing for the cameras. He was flanked on each side by his bosses, Yankee co-owners Del Webb and Dan Topping.

"There will always be a place for DiMaggio with the Yankees," added Webb. "We have offered him several propositions, including the television post. Joe hasn't made up his mind which one to accept."

Stengel said he planned to use 21-year-old Mickey Mantle to DiMaggio's place in centerfield.

600 Fans See Burke And Cutshaw Star As Visitors Win Third

A preview of the battle for Class A honors in the state was witnessed last night by some 600 fans at Fort Hill when Coach Mel Henry's Hagerstown High quintet edged Fort Hill in a 39-35 thriller in the opening contest for the Sentinels. It was the third straight victory for Hagerstown.

The battle was a close, hard-fought contest all the way with the issue in doubt right up to the final minute. The score was tied no less than 11 times and changed hands on 11 other occasions.

At this point Referee Bob Pence called a field goal try by Jim Gossard of the Maroons good when Center John Poling of the Sentinels touched the net on the basket trying to stop the shot, giving Hagerstown its largest margin in the tilt. Burke's foul closed out the scoring seconds later.

Fort Hill took an 11-7 lead in the quarter and trailed 17-15 at halftime and 28-26 at the close of the third stanza.

McGregor and Ritter each left the game on personals in the last quarter.

Joe DiMaggio Quits Baseball After 13 Years With Yankees

May Take Position As TV Broadcaster

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP) — Joe DiMaggio, who ranks beside Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth as one of the greatest of all ball players, announced his retirement from baseball today.

While it was not a complete surprise, the announcement came as a shock to the nation's fans who long had thrilled to the batting and fielding exploits of the brilliant New York Yankee outfielder.

DiMaggio, at a specially arranged news conference in the plush Yankee offices before newsreel and television cameras, said he never would don a baseball uniform again. He said he never had entertained managerial or coaching ambitions and probably would accept a job with the Yankee organization as a television broadcaster.

It is expected that DiMaggio, who collected $704,769.71 during 13 years playing with the club, would take the post of TV commentator of the Yankees' home baseball games. That post, left vacant when Dizzy Dean transferred to St. Louis to broadcast the Browns' games, reportedly will bring $50,000 a season.

DiMaggio, 37 years old last Nov. 25, said a series of injuries and mishaps which hampered him throughout his brilliant major league career, all of it with the Yankees, prompted his decision to quit.

"I knew I was beginning to slip as far back as three years ago," DiMag said. "The old timing was beginning to leave me and my reflexes were beginning to slow up.

DiMaggio said he knew he was going to miss the game but that he did not feel badly about that.

"Right now I feel wonderful," he said with a grin. "But I cannot forget those tortuous days and nights of agony. No, I've played my last game of ball and I have no regrets. I feel that I have reached the stage where I can no longer produce for my club, my manager, my teammates and my fans.

DiMaggio spent an hour posing for the cameras. He was flanked on each side by his bosses, Yankee co-owners Del Webb and Dan Topping.

"There will always be a place for DiMaggio with the Yankees," added Webb. "We have offered him several propositions, including the television post. Joe hasn't made up his mind which one to accept."

Stengel said he planned to use 21-year-old Mickey Mantle to DiMaggio's place in centerfield.

Joe DiMaggio Quits Baseball After 13 Years With Yankees

May Take Position As TV Broadcaster

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP) — Joe DiMaggio, who ranks beside Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth as one of the greatest of all ball players, announced his retirement from baseball today.

While it was not a complete surprise, the announcement came as a shock to the nation's fans who long had thrilled to the batting and fielding exploits of the brilliant New York Yankee outfielder.

DiMaggio, at a specially arranged news conference in the plush Yankee offices before newsreel and television cameras, said he never would don a baseball uniform again. He said he never had entertained managerial or coaching ambitions and probably would accept a job with the Yankee organization as a television broadcaster.

It is expected that DiMaggio, who collected $704,769.71 during 13 years playing with the club, would take the post of TV commentator of the Yankees' home baseball games. That post, left vacant when Dizzy Dean transferred to St. Louis to broadcast the Browns' games, reportedly will bring $50,000 a season.

DiMaggio, 37 years old last Nov. 25, said a series of injuries and mishaps which hampered him throughout his brilliant major league career, all of it with the Yankees, prompted his decision to quit.

"I knew I was beginning to slip as far back as three years ago," DiMag said. "The old timing was beginning to leave me and my reflexes were beginning to slow up.

DiMaggio said he knew he was going to miss the game but that he did not feel badly about that.

"Right now I feel wonderful," he said with a grin. "But I cannot forget those tortuous days and nights of agony. No, I've played my last game of ball and I have no regrets. I feel that I have reached the stage where I can no longer produce for my club, my manager, my teammates and my fans.

DiMaggio spent an hour posing for the cameras. He was flanked on each side by his bosses, Yankee co-owners Del Webb and Dan Topping.

"There will always be a place for DiMaggio with the Yankees," added Webb. "We have offered him several propositions, including the television post. Joe hasn't made up his mind which one to accept."

Stengel said he planned to use 21-year-old Mickey Mantle to DiMaggio's place in centerfield.

Bowersmen Top Somerset High By 42-39

Ronnie Sisk Breaks Deadlock In Final Minute Of Thriller

SOMERSET, Pa., Dec. 11—Ronnie Sisk broke a 38-38 deadlock with a minute to play with a long set heave and Junior Eversole added a doubledecker at the whistle to give Allegany High's cagers a thrilling 42-39 decision over Somerset here tonight before approximately 300 fans.

The game was a nip-and-tuck thriller all the way with never more than three points separating the two teams throughout the contest and with the lead changing hands several times. The score was tied on numerous occasions.

Somerset broke out on top to start the game but Allegany held a 12-11 lead at the quarter. Somerset came back to lead 22-19 at halftime and the count was tied 28-28 as the third quarter closed.

Allegany was leading 38-36 when Doug Kerin hooped a pivot toss to knot the count for the last time with a minute and a half to play.

Sisk's long set heave then broke the deadlock and Dean Bowman of Somerset hooped a foul to make it 40-39 with 30 seconds left. Eversole's under the hoop shot just as the whistle sounded cinched matters for the visitors.

Alex Konikowski Tops IL Hurlers

Has Best Earned Run Average With 2.59

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Alex Konikowski, promoted to the New York Giants late in the season, compiled the best earned run average in the International League in 1951.

Konikowski, only 23 and with eight seasons of pro ball under his belt, allowed only 2.59 runs per game, according to the final official pitching averages released today.

The young righthander's record is truly amazing as his team, the Ottawa Giants, finished seventh. Konikowski won eight games and lost seven. He also tied Rochester's Ed Yuhas for the lead in most shutouts, five.

Knuckleball artist Bob Ti enauer of Rochester and teammate Jackie Collum finished second ar third, respectively, in the earned run averages. Tiefenauer finished with a 2.66 mark and Collum, who wound up his season with the St. Louis Cardinals, had a 2.80 mark.

Lefty Mal Mallette of Montreal compiled the best won-lost mark. Mallette won 10 games and lost two for a .833 record. Mallette's earned run average was 2.30 but he did not qualify for the honors as he appeared in less than 154 innings.

Toronto's John Hetki won the most games, 19, and Syracuse's Jack Robinson lost the most, 15. Hetki, a former Cincinnati Red, reports to the St. Louis Browns in 1952.

Hetki also pitched the most innings, 256, and started the most games, 32. Another Maple Leaf, Ernie Shore, appeared in the most games, 55.

Lefty Bill Miller of Syracuse, purchased by the New York Yankees, led the league in Strikeouts with 131 and in walks with 118.

Post-Season Bowl Games Are Favored By 4 To 1 Margin

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—With all the cries of over-emphasis and commercialism in collegiate sports, there has been talk—and some action—that the post-season bowl games be stricken from the football schedules.

The Big Seven Conference has banned all post-season athletic contests effective next year.

This action, however, was in sharp contrast to the results of a poll by the Associated Press of over 100 of the nation's sports writers and sportscasters. By a margin of approximately 4-to-1, their opinion was that bowl games are harmless and should be retained.

Almost all those who favored retention, however, suggested that some sort of restrictions be placed upon them.

Many thought the number of bowls be limited to a select few—such as the Rose, Cotton, Sugar and Orange bowls.

Others thought the gate receipts of the classics should be split among the members of the conference which is represented. Others favored continuance of only the charity games, such as the East-West and North-South classics.

Those who thought bowl games should be abolished said these games lead to "professionalism" and are "commercialism at its highest peak." Others said they made the season too long, and placed too much emphasis on getting teams of bowl calibre.

Game Officials Investigate Slaying Of Five Does In Green Ridge Forest

Just why five female deer were left in the Green Ridge State Forest, east of Cumberland, after they were carefully skinned and dressed is being investigated by Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, and his staff.

Minke, on the right, and Joseph Keating, of Frostburg, district game warden, are shown in the above picture making a thorough inspection of the illegal does that were discovered by Keating on Monday evening on the southwest slope of Green Ridge, near the old Rossell orchard tract, two days after the close of Maryland's six-day open season on bucks.

Game officials hint these illegal kills could be the result of market hunting as it is unlikely that any group of hunters would kill and dress five deer at one time. The slain animals represent about 450 pounds of venison, and the loss of these female deer could mean a total loss of approximately 60 deer to this area over a three-year period.

Minke believes that these deer could have been dumped in the forest and covered with leaves due to the extensive effort on the part of the wardens in inspecting every vehicle leaving the forest between sunset and sunrise.

Game officials point out that if the illegal killing of deer could be controlled, the legal kill of buck deer could be more than doubled in three years in this county alone.

"Five years ago I proposed that out-of-state students be barred from intercollegiate competition, and I repeated that recommendation to other Big Seven conference presidents last weekend."

Gavilan Wants Humez Bout In United States

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Welterweight champion Kid Gavilan said today he is willing to defend his crown against Charles Humez "but in the United States."

The next move is up to Humez.

"I came here to win my championship," the Cuban said. "Let him come here to fight me. I fight him anytime. I fight anybody. I'm ready to sign anytime."

Then the Kid returned to his bag-punching chore. Gavilan meets Middleweight contender Walter Cartier in a non-title ten rounder at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Gavilan gave the statement in reply to a warning by the NBA that he sign within ten days to defend his title against Humez, French holder of the European welterweight championship. The NBA said he would forfeit his title if he doesn't sign within that time.

Charles, Maxim To Meet Tonight

Benefit Bout Set For 12 Rounds

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11 (AP)—Ezzard Charles, dethroned heavyweight champion, and Joe Maxim, the light heavyweight titlist, renew their protracted ring war tomorrow night in a 12-round non-title scrap. Charles has emerged victor in four previous battles.

Promoters Jimmy Murray and Lou Thomas, on the basis of advance ticket sales, are predicting a gate of $100,000 for the boys' camp benefit event.

The fight will begin at 7 p. m. (10 p. m. EST) to accommodate a nationwide telecast of the fight. The television rights will drop $25,000 more into the fight till.

Both fighters have ended gruelling training schedules. Each boxed about 150 rounds.

Maxim's handlers reported him in excellent shape.

Charles, likewise, was pronounced ready. Throughout his training siege he gave every indication he would this time try to put fancy boxing Maxim away. He moved in on sparring mates flat-footed and strove for more punching power.

On the other hand, Maxim trained for speed. He likely will try to stand off and cut up the ex-champion with his wide array of blows.

Post-Season Bowl Games Are Favored By 4 To 1 Margin

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—With all the cries of over-emphasis and commercialism in collegiate sports, there has been talk—and some action—that the post-season bowl games be stricken from the football schedules.

The Big Seven Conference has banned all post-season athletic contests effective next year.

This action, however, was in sharp contrast to the results of a poll by the Associated Press of over 100 of the nation's sports writers and sportscasters. By a margin of approximately 4-to-1, their opinion was that bowl games are harmless and should be retained.

Almost all those who favored retention, however, suggested that some sort of restrictions be placed upon them.

Many thought the number of bowls be limited to a select few—such as the Rose, Cotton. Sugar and Orange bowls.

Others thought the gate receipts of the classics should be split among the members of the conference which is represented. Others favored continuance of only the charity games, such as the East-West and North-South classics.

Those who thought bowl games should be abolished said these games lead to "professionalism" and are "commercialism at its highest peak." Others said they made the season too long, and placed too much emphasis on getting teams of bowl calibre.

Game Officials Investigate Slaying Of Five Does In Green Ridge Forest

Just why five female deer were left in the Green Ridge State Forest, east of Cumberland, after they were carefully skinned and dressed is being investigated by Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, and his staff.

Minke, on the right, and Joseph Keating, of Frostburg, district game warden, are shown in the above picture making a thorough inspection of the illegal does that were discovered by Keating on Monday evening on the southwest slope of Green Ridge, near the old Rossell orchard tract, two days after the close of Maryland's six-day open season on bucks.

Game officials hint these illegal kills could be the result of market hunting as it is unlikely that any group of hunters would kill and dress five deer at one time. The slain animals represent about 450 pounds of venison, and the loss of these female deer could mean a total loss of approximately 60 deer to this area over a three-year period.

Minke believes that these deer could have been dumped in the forest and covered with leaves due to the extensive effort on the part of the wardens in inspecting every vehicle leaving the forest between sunset and sunrise.

Game officials point out that if the illegal killing of deer could be controlled, the legal kill of buck deer could be more than doubled in three years in this county alone.

"Five years ago I proposed that out-of-state students be barred from intercollegiate competition, and I repeated that recommendation to other Big Seven conference presidents last weekend."

Gavilan Wants Humez Bout In United States

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Welterweight champion Kid Gavilan said today he is willing to defend his crown against Charles Humez "but in the United States."

The next move is up to Humez.

"I came here to win my championship," the Cuban said. "Let him come here to fight me. I fight him anytime. I fight anybody. I'm ready to sign anytime."

Then the Kid returned to his bag-punching chore. Gavilan meets Middleweight contender Walter Cartier in a non-title ten rounder at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Gavilan gave the statement in reply to a warning by the NBA that he sign within ten days to defend his title against Humez, French holder of the European welterweight championship. The NBA said he would forfeit his title if he doesn't sign within that time.

Charles, Maxim To Meet Tonight

Benefit Bout Set For 12 Rounds

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11 (AP)—Ezzard Charles, dethroned heavyweight champion, and Joe Maxim, the light heavyweight titlist, renew their protracted ring war tomorrow night in a 12-round non-title scrap. Charles has emerged victor in four previous battles.

Promoters Jimmy Murray and Lou Thomas, on the basis of advance ticket sales, are predicting a gate of $100,000 for the boys' camp benefit event.

The fight will begin at 7 p. m. (10 p. m. EST) to accommodate a nationwide telecast of the fight. The television rights will drop $25,000 more into the fight till.

Both fighters have ended gruelling training schedules. Each boxed about 150 rounds.

Maxim's handlers reported him in excellent shape.

Charles, likewise, was pronounced ready. Throughout his training siege he gave every indication he would this time try to put fancy boxing Maxim away. He moved in on sparring mates flat-footed and strove for more punching power.

On the other hand, Maxim trained for speed. He likely will try to stand off and cut up the ex-champion with his wide array of blows.

Game Officials Investigate Slaying Of Five Does In Green Ridge Forest

Just why five female deer were left in the Green Ridge State Forest, east of Cumberland, after they were carefully skinned and dressed is being investigated by Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, and his staff.

Minke, on the right, and Joseph Keating, of Frostburg, district game warden, are shown in the above picture making a thorough inspection of the illegal does that were discovered by Keating on Monday evening on the southwest slope of Green Ridge, near the old Rossell orchard tract, two days after the close of Maryland's six-day open season on bucks.

Game officials hint these illegal kills could be the result of market hunting as it is unlikely that any group of hunters would kill and dress five deer at one time. The slain animals represent about 450 pounds of venison, and the loss of these female deer could mean a total loss of approximately 60 deer to this area over a three-year period.

Minke believes that these deer could have been dumped in the forest and covered with leaves due to the extensive effort on the part of the wardens in inspecting every vehicle leaving the forest between sunset and sunrise.

Game officials point out that if the illegal killing of deer could be controlled, the legal kill of buck deer could be more than doubled in three years in this county alone.

Missourian Would Ban Out-Of-State Athletes

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 11. (INS)—The president of the University of Missouri favors barring out-of-state students from intercollegiate competition in the Big Seven Conference.

Frederick A. Middlebush said during an interview in St. Louis:

"We wouldn't need all these other restrictions, trying to get away from high-pressure sports and commercialism, if the unbelievable scramble for athletes were eliminated.

"Five years ago I proposed that out-of-state students be barred from intercollegiate competition, and I repeated that recommendation to other Big Seven conference presidents last weekend."

Gavilan Wants Humez Bout In United States

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Welterweight champion Kid Gavilan said today he is willing to defend his crown against Charles Humez "but in the United States."

The next move is up to Humez. "I came here to win my championship," the Cuban said. "Let him come here to fight me. I fight him anytime. I fight anybody. I'm ready to sign anytime."

Then the Kid returned to his bag-punching chore. Gavilan meets Middleweight contender Walter Cartier in a non-title ten rounder at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Gavilan gave the statement in reply to a warning by the NBA that he sign within ten days to defend his title against Humez, French holder of the European welterweight championship. The NBA said he would forfeit his title if he doesn't sign within that time.

Charles, Maxim To Meet Tonight

Benefit Bout Set For 12 Rounds

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11 (AP)—Ezzard Charles, dethroned heavyweight champion, and Joe Maxim, the light heavyweight titlist, renew their protracted ring war tomorrow night in a 12-round non-title scrap. Charles has emerged victor in four previous battles.

Promoters Jimmy Murray and Lee Thomas, on the basis of advance ticket sales, are predicting a gate of $100,000 for the boys' camp benefit event.

The fight will begin at 7 p. m. (10 p. m. EST) to accommodate a nationwide telecast of the fight. The television rights will drop $25,000 more into the fight till.

Both fighters have ended gruelling training schedules. Each boxed about 150 rounds.

Maxim's handlers reported him in excellent shape.

Charles, likewise, was pronounced ready. Throughout his training siege he gave every indication he would this time try to put fancy boxing Maxim away. He moved in on sparring mates flat-footed and strove for more punching power.

On the other hand, Maxim trained for speed. He likely will try to stand off and cut up the ex-champion with his wide array of blows.

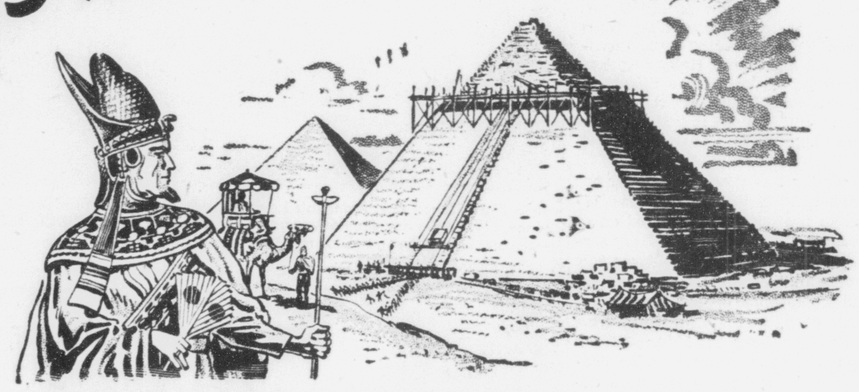
IS THAT A FACT! by Ches Peake



MODERN TOOLS . . . 4,000 YEARS AGO. Research at the pyramids in Egypt shows that the builders used tools surprisingly like those of modern times. Among these tools were drills and straight and circular saws. The drills were set with jewels, and even lathe-tools had such cutting edges. The quality of the tools and the skill of the workmen were such that the cutting marks in the granite show no indication of tool wear.

MODERN TOOLS . . . 4,000 YEARS AGO. Research at the pyramids in Egypt shows that the builders used tools surprisingly like those of modern times. Among these tools were drills and straight and circular saws. The drills were set with jewels, and even lathe-tools had such cutting edges. The quality of the tools and the skill of the workmen were such that the cutting marks in the granite show no indication of tool wear.

COLLECTING FOR HER MAJESTY. The first customhouse in the American colonies was built in 1706 in Yorktown, Va. Richard Ambler presumably was the first Collector of Customs, for records show that he occupied the customhouse around that time. During this period, Yorktown was the port of entry for New York, Philadelphia and other Northern cities.

Special Insurance Available For Korean Disabled Vets

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of four special articles, prepared by Veterans Administration, explaining the rights of newly-discharged veterans to Government life insurance.

Insurance For Disabled Veterans

A special type of Government life insurance is available to veterans of the U. S. Armed Forces who were disabled in active military service anywhere in the world since June 27, 1950, the start of the Korean Campaign.

These veterans must meet two requirements (under Section 620 of the National Service Life Insurance Act).

(1) They must have been released or separated from active service on or after April 25, 1951, under other than dishonorable conditions; and,

(2) They must be found by Veterans Administration to be suffering from a service-connected disability or disabilities for which VA compensation would be payable, if 10 percent or more in degree. Further, they must not be suffering from a nonservice-connected disability or disabilities that make them uninsurable.

These veterans must apply for the special NSLI to Veterans Administration within one year from the date that VA finds their disability or disabilities to be service connected. Applications, with medical examinations and the required premium, should be mailed to Veterans Administration, Washington 25, D. C.

If the necessary requirements are met, totally disabled veterans may apply for a waiver of premium at the time they file application for the insurance. However, all such applications should include the required premium with their applications and continue to pay this premium on time until they are notified by VA that waiver has been granted. Premiums paid under waiver will be refunded.

This special insurance for the disabled is a form of National Service Life Insurance, and several types of policies are available—term, ordinary life, 20-pay life, 30-pay life, and endowments. For the totally disabled, no endowment plans may be issued; however, all others may be issued.

The amount of any policy may range from $1,000 to $10,000, less any other Government life insurance in force at the time of application.

These policies, in general, are the same as regular NSLI policies, except that the premium rates are on a different basis and the policies do not earn dividends. There are other differences, but most of the conditions are the same.

Although eligible disabled veterans must apply for this special insurance within one year from the date that VA finds their disabilities to be service-connected, they may make application immediately after separation or release from active service and thus set the machinery in motion for a ruling on the service-connection of their disability or disabilities.

Another group of persons may be eligible for this special NSLI for the disabled. This group includes: (1) persons provisionally accepted on or after June 27, 1950, for military service who suffer a disability while enroute under orders to a place for final acceptance or for entry upon active duty, and (2) draftees who, on or after June 27, 1950, suffer a disability while enroute under orders from their draft boards to a designated induction station.

These two groups must apply for the special insurance within one year from the date they suffered their disability or disabilities.

For further information, veterans should contact their nearest VA office immediately after separation or release from active service.

ARRIVING in Long Beach, Calif., Terry Ellis, 7, of Helena, Mont., waves to those on hand to greet him. He'll receive a $6,500 trust fund from the crew of the U.S.S. Helena, which is returning from Korea. Terry, selected by the sailors from a group of Helena underprivileged children, has intestinal tract abnormalities. Part of the money will be used to finance a series of operations. (International)

Today

Many of the wrongdoers in office, of course, came from a preceding Democratic administration. Mr. Truman owed them nothing and should have replaced them long ago. He will have to share the blame and responsibility now, however, for allowing them to occupy positions of public trust. But what has happened is less important than what is going to happen. Will Mr. Truman takes the steps necessary to turn the light of full publicity on the men who have been his lieutenants? Will he wipe the slate clean or just try by a few dramatic gestures to give the impression of a wronged or outraged executive?

The situation calls for a cleansing all the way through. It is inevitable, whether Mr. Truman does it or not. And that's the ray of hope. When things get very bad in America, the very intensity of public disgust brings a reaction and a reform. That's the constructive result which will follow in the wake of some ruined reputations and perhaps disgraced careers and jail sentences.

Special Insurance Available For Korean Disabled Vets

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of four special articles, prepared by Veterans Administration, explaining the rights of newly-discharged veterans to Government life insurance.

Insurance For Disabled Veterans

A special type of Government life insurance is available to veterans of the U. S. Armed Forces who were disabled in active military service anywhere in the world since June 27, 1950, the start of the Korean Campaign.

These veterans must meet two requirements (under Section 620 of the National Service Life Insurance Act).

(1) They must have been released or separated from active service on or after April 25, 1951, under other than dishonorable conditions; and,

(2) They must be found by Veterans Administration to be suffering from a service-connected disability or disabilities for which VA compensation would be payable, if 10 percent or more in degree. Further, they must not be suffering from a nonservice-connected disability or disabilities that make them uninsurable.

These veterans must apply for the special NSLI to Veterans Administration within one year from the date that VA finds their disability or disabilities to be service connected. Applications, with medical examinations and the required premium, should be mailed to Veterans Administration, Washington 25, D. C.

If the necessary requirements are met, totally disabled veterans may apply for a waiver of premium at the time they file application for the insurance. However, all such applications should include the required premium with their applications and continue to pay this premium on time until they are notified by VA that waiver has been granted. Premiums paid under waiver will be refunded.

This special insurance for the disabled is a form of National Service Life Insurance, and several types of policies are available—term, ordinary life, 20-pay life, 30-pay life, and endowments. For the totally disabled, no endowment plans may be issued; however, all others may be issued.

The amount of any policy may range from $1,000 to $10,000, less any other Government life insurance in force at the time of application.

These policies, in general, are the same as regular NSLI policies, except that the premium rates are on a different basis and the policies do not earn dividends. There are other differences, but most of the conditions are the same.

Although eligible disabled veterans must apply for this special insurance within one year from the date that VA finds their disabilities to be service-connected, they may make application immediately after separation or release from active service and thus set the machinery in motion for a ruling on the service-connection of their disability or disabilities.

Another group of persons may be eligible for this special NSLI for the disabled. This group includes: (1) persons provisionally accepted on or after June 27, 1950, for military service who suffer a disability while enroute under orders to a place for final acceptance or for entry upon active duty, and (2) draftees who, on or after June 27, 1950, suffer a disability while enroute under orders from their draft boards to a designated induction station.

These two groups must apply for the special insurance within one year from the date they suffered their disability or disabilities.

For further information, veterans should contact their nearest VA office immediately after separation or release from active service.

Many of the wrongdoers in office, of course, came from a preceding Democratic administration. Mr. Truman owed them nothing and should have replaced them long ago. He will have to share the blame and responsibility now, however, for allowing them to occupy positions of public trust. But what has happened is less important than what is going to happen. Will Mr. Truman takes the steps necessary to turn the light of full publicity on the men who have been his lieutenants? Will he wipe the slate clean or just try by a few dramatic gestures to give the impression of a wronged or outraged executive?

The situation calls for a cleansing all the way through. It is inevitable, whether Mr. Truman does it or not. And that's the ray of hope. When things get very bad in America, the very intensity of public disgust brings a reaction and a reform. That's the constructive result which will follow in the wake of some ruined reputations and perhaps disgraced careers and jail sentences.

Conditional Release Of Stepinac May Result In New Catholic Shrine

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia— (AP) — The Communist government of Yugoslavia, in seeking to close the case of Roman Catholic Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac by releasing him to live in the rural village of Krasic, may unwittingly have created a Catholic shrine.

Catholic sources here said they expect large crowds of the Catholic faithful to pour into Krasic during the coming holiday season to worship at the 400-year-old village church where the archbishop is now serving as a simple priest.

Krasic is only 18 miles southwest of Zagreb, capital of Croatia, and is easily reachable by a good road. For tourists it is only a half day's automobile trip from Belgrade.

The Communist press of Yugoslavia has largely ignored the archbishop since the announcement of his "conditional" release. The condition was that he was not to resume his ecclesiastical office as primate of Yugoslavia. One Zagreb newspaper carried an interview with him when he left prison, but Belgrade papers commented only briefly on the prelate's release, using the official news agency's description of him as the "former archbishop."

The obvious wish of the Belgrade government to get the archbishop out of prison into an obscure village was reflected in the interview in the Zagreb paper Vijesnik. This account ended with the words:

"The dust of the automobile carrying Stepinac from Lepoglava prison to his native Krasic covers the case, and the case is now closed."

But despite the general approval of Western diplomats for the government's action in releasing the archbishop, there were indications the case is far from closed. In his interview with foreign correspondents after his release, Archbishop Stepinac rejected the government's description of him as the "former archbishop." He told the newsmen:

"I am a legitimate archbishop. I am not a former archbishop."

A correspondent for Tanjug, the official news agency, received an impression from this statement different from that received by any other correspondent present. In a brief dispatch on the archbishop's meeting with the foreign correspondents, the Tanjug reporter quoted him as having said:

"I never asked for the post of bishop, and now I am willingly giving it up. I have no pretension to be a bishop of the Catholic Church, and I will perform in Krasic a priest's duty, if necessary until my death."

Every other correspondent in the vestibule of the small Church of the Holy Trinity distinctly heard the archbishop reject the government's demotion of him to a simple priest.

It also was learned that the archbishop only a few days before his release had refused an offer that he leave prison to go to Krasic and asked instead to serve his full 16-year term or be unconditionally released. What impelled him to change his mind and accept the conditional release was not learned.

The Catholic population of the country, particularly in Croatia, knowing only what it reads in the press and hears over the Yugoslav radio, received the announcement of the release well, considering the archbishop was on th road to complete freedom. But political circles feel the move may have important consequences, with the next move coming from the Vatican.

Both the government and Catholic sources minimized the fears in some diplomatic quarters that the archbishop might be in danger from fantics who might seek to attack him in the unprotected Krasic parish house. There was considerable and deep resentment against the archbishop among the Serbian Orthodox population of Croatia; there is a Serbian orthodox settlement only 20 miles from Krasic.

It is believed here that the arrival late this month of the new Yugoslav minister to Rome, Gen. Vlado Velebit, may bring some further clarification of the situation. Velebit is considered one of Yugoslavia's most able diplomats. One of his most important assignments in Rome will be to help work out a settlement of the delicate Trieste question. Since Yugoslavia is not represented at the Vatican, he undoubtedly also will be entrusted with any negotiations in the church-state conflict.

Conditional Release Of Stepinac May Result In New Catholic Shrine

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia— (AP) — The Communist government of Yugoslavia, in seeking to close the case of Roman Catholic Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac by releasing him to live in the rural village of Krasic, may unwittingly have created a Catholic shrine.

Catholic sources here said they expect large crowds of the Catholic faithful to pour into Krasic during the coming holiday season to worship at the 400-year-old village church where the archbishop is now serving as a simple priest.

Krasic is only 18 miles southwest of Zagreb, capital of Croatia, and is easily reachable by a good road. For tourists it is only a half day's automobile trip from Belgrade.

The Communist press of Yugoslavia has largely ignored the archbishop since the announcement of his "conditional" release. The condition was that he was not to resume his ecclesiastical office as primate of Yugoslavia. One Zagreb newspaper carried an interview with him when he left prison, but Belgrade papers commented only briefly on the prelate's release, using the official news agency's description of him as the "former archbishop."

The obvious wish of the Belgrade government to get the archbishop out of prison into an obscure village was reflected in the interview in the Zagreb paper Vijesnik. This account ended with the words:

"The dust of the automobile carrying Stepinac from Lepoglava prison to his native Krasic covers the case, and the case is now closed."

But despite the general approval of Western diplomats for the government's action in releasing the archbishop, there were indications the case is far from closed. In his interview with foreign correspondents after his release, Archbishop Stepinac rejected the government's description of him as the "former archbishop." He told the newsmen:

"I am a legitimate archbishop. I am not a former archbishop."

A correspondent for Tanjug, the official news agency, received an impression from this statement different from that received by any other correspondent present. In a brief dispatch on the archbishop's meeting with the foreign correspondents, the Tanjug reporter quoted him as having said:

"I never asked for the post of bishop, and now I am willingly giving it up. I have no pretension to be a bishop of the Catholic Church, and I will perform in Krasic a priest's duty, if necessary until my death."

Every other correspondent in the vestibule of the small Church of the Holy Trinity distinctly heard the archbishop reject the government's demotion of him to a simple priest.

It also was learned that the archbishop only a few days before his release had refused an offer that he leave prison to go to Krasic and asked instead to serve his full 16-year term or be unconditionally released. What impelled him to change his mind and accept the conditional release was not learned.

The Catholic population of the country, particularly in Croatia, knowing only what it reads in the press and hears over the Yugoslav radio, received the announcement of the release well, considering the archbishop was on th road to complete freedom. But political circles feel the move may have important consequences, with the next move coming from the Vatican.

Both the government and Catholic sources minimized the fears in some diplomatic quarters that the archbishop might be in danger from fantics who might seek to attack him in the unprotected Krasic parish house. There was considerable and deep resentment against the archbishop among the Serbian Orthodox population of Croatia; there is a Serbian orthodox settlement only 20 miles from Krasic.

It is believed here that the arrival late this month of the new Yugoslav minister to Rome, Gen. Vlado Velebit, may bring some further clarification of the situation. Velebit is considered one of Yugoslavia's most able diplomats. One of his most important assignments in Rome will be to help work out a settlement of the delicate Trieste question. Since Yugoslavia is not represented at the Vatican, he undoubtedly also will be entrusted with any negotiations in the church-state conflict.

Street Widening Conference Held

KEYSER, W. Va.—Superintendent of Mineral County Schools, H. L. Idleman, and members of the Board of Education conferred with local State Road Commission officials here yesterday, but were unable to get the promise of any change in the plan that was outlined to the board about continuation of U. S. Highway No. 220 over South Mineral Street.

This plan calls for a 40-foot highway along South Mineral Street, with the exception of that portion on which Potomac State School borders. Along the state school property, the road will be cut to 38 feet, and the stone wall, along that property, will not be molested. Other properties along the thoroughfare will be cut back.

According to present plans, a contract for widening South Mineral Street will be awarded in March and construction work will be started in June with the aim of completing it by September.

William L. Wilson, Jr., attorney for Hawkins, stated his client was charged with a violation of the motor vehicle laws and was arrested by Trooper Timothy Gilmore on November 10. Hawkins claims he posted the $107.90 bond with Officer Thomas of the Frostburg Police Department.

The petitioner states he was not advised as to when the case would be tried and that Magistrate James N. Carter ordered the bond forfeited on November 13.

Hawkins said the first notice he had of the action was when he received a letter from the Maryland Department of Motor Vehicles on December 5 showing forfeiture of the bond.

He said the procedure was contrary to law as he had never been notified of a hearing. He asks the Circuit Court for a writ of certiorari to transfer the hearing to the higher court.

Bond Return Aim Of Eckhart Man

A petition was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by George Dilos Hawkins, of Eckhart, in which he asks that forfeiture of $107.90 bond in a motor case by a Frostburg magistrate be rescinded and a hearing be held by the higher court.

William L. Wilson, Jr., attorney for Hawkins, stated his client was charged with a violation of the motor vehicle laws and was arrested by Trooper Timothy Gilmore on November 10. Hawkins claims he posted the $107.90 bond with Officer Thomas of the Frostburg Police Department.

The petitioner states he was not advised as to when the case would be tried and that Magistrate James N. Carter ordered the bond forfeited on November 13.

Hawkins said the first notice he had of the action was when he received a letter from the Maryland Department of Motor Vehicles on December 5 showing forfeiture of the bond.

He said the procedure was contrary to law as he had never been notified of a hearing. He asks the Circuit Court for a writ of certiorari to transfer the hearing to the higher court.

Police in a series of raids confiscated 16 machines at Legion Clubs at Williamsport, Hancock, Camp Ritchie and Funkstown.

Meanwhile, State's Attorney John Holliday said he would ask the Federal Department of Justice to provide him with the names of the owners of the machines, and said that additional charges may be preferred on the basis of the information he receives.

Street Widening Conference Held

KEYSER, W. Va.—Superintendent of Mineral County Schools, H. L. Idleman, and members of the Board of Education conferred with local State Road Commission officials here yesterday, but were unable to get the promise of any change in the plan that was outlined to the board about continuation of U. S. Highway No. 220 over South Mineral Street.

This plan calls for a 40-foot highway along South Mineral Street, with the exception of that portion on which Potomac State School borders. Along the state school property, the road will be cut to 38 feet, and the stone wall, along that property, will not be molested. Other properties along the thoroughfare will be cut back.

According to present plans, a contract for widening South Mineral Street will be awarded in March and construction work will be started in June with the aim of completing it by September.

Citizen reaction has been stirred and comments are unfavorable. Some of the property owners along the street threaten to fight the State Road Commission plan.

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11—(INS)—Gloria Swanson heads straight back to Hollywood to make another picture for Ed Alperson and Milton Bren as soon as "Nina" closes on Broadway. Yes, she's going to remain in the role until the play closes.

Gloria Swanson

"I am going to stick to the ship," said Gloria via long distance from New York. In spite of bad reviews, "Nina" is sold out for seven weeks with an advance sale of $120,000, mostly because of Gloria's name.

"I am sure those who invested in the show will get their money back," she said, "it isn't a costly production because there are only two other actors in the cast beside David Niven and myself."

I think Gloria will be glad to see Hollywood again. She was very happy making "Three For Bedroom" for Alperson and Bren last fall.

Her daughter, Michele Farmer, will married Saturday at the Little Church Around the Corner to Robert Amon.

Roy Rogers, who just won a four-year battle to keep Republic from selling his old films to TV, now goes "live" on TV himself—which is what everyone expected including his old bosses.

However, this won't be Roy's own show. He'll "guest spot" with his wife, Dale Evans, his hoss, Trigger, plus Carmen Miranda, Alan Young and Jack Paar, and get experience in the new medium before springing his own act.

While Roy's row with Republic was going on he was restrained from personally appearing on TV.

The future fate of show business may hinge on this legal decision, wherein studios cannot issue old films for commercial TV without the consent of the star—and a cash payment.

Young Peter Howard, son of Mrs. George Vanderbilt, and Betsy Von Furstenberg's most ardent admirer, telephoned me from New York.

"I haven't given up hope of marrying Betsy," he told me. "I don't believe she's ever marry Nick Hilton. She's coming to New York on the sixth of January to go into the stage play 'Dear Barbarian,' and I am going to be right here.

"I am studying for the stage with Vicky Cummings and I had a test made in Italy by Leonid Moguy," said the undaunted Peter. I believe that Betsy and I were made for each other. I have known her always and I am not going to give her up."

I'm beginning to think that Jane Wyman wasn't fooling when she said "I'm the kind of girl who can fall into a mud trap and come up with a gold mine."

Jane, who will undoubtedly be nominated for "Blue Veil" when Academy time rolls around, also is headed for stardom in another field.

Her Decca records, made with Bing Crosby and Groucho Marx, are doing a land office business. Her newest, "It Was Nice While The Money Rolled In," is so much in the groove that officials of that company are trying to get her to sign an exclusive recording contract that will pay off in six figures.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Do successful writers "hate to write"?

Answer: Most of them apparently like to believe so, in a recent collection of personal statements by prominent literary figures, the majority described the task of composition in terms ranging up to "torture.' Why they go on writing if it is so painful, they do not say—and probably do not know. Their attitude appears to confirm the psychoanalytic belief that creative writing involves the unconscious gratification of forbidden impulses like exhibitionism, and that this must be atoned for by self-punishment, which frequently takes the form of agonizing struggles to find "just the right word."

Is there any such thing as an "average child"?

Answer: Not really, warn a group of educators in the Journal of the National Educational Association. The teacher who thinks of most of her pupils as "just average children" will deprive them of the individual recognition which each child needs, while conversely, the more closely any "average child" is studied, the more clearly he will be seen to be uniquely himself. A psychologist might add that the same rule applies to adults and that the key to success in dealing with your neighbors is to refuse to "lump them all together" but see each one as an individual with his or her own special needs and interests.

Is "guessing" unscientific?

Answer: Not if you know you are guessing and don't treat your guesses as facts until you have verified them. Most established scientific principles — the relation between germs and disease, for example—were originally guesses or hypotheses which experiments eventually proved to be true. Depth psychology or psychoanalysis has bee ncriticized as being "mostly guesswork," because you cannot know positively in advance what is in anyone's unconscious mind. But the well-trained analyst will "guess right" most of the time, and will check his guesses by the patient's response before taking them as final.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Do successful writers "hate to write"?

Answer: Most of them apparently like to believe so, in a recent collection of personal statements by prominent literary figures, the majority described the task of composition in terms ranging up to "torture.' Why they go on writing if it is so painful, they do not say—and probably do not know. Their attitude appears to confirm the psychoanalytic belief that creative writing involves the unconscious gratification of forbidden impulses like exhibitionism, and that this must be atoned for by self-punishment, which frequently takes the form of agonizing struggles to find "just the right word."

Is there any such thing as an "average child"?

Answer: Not really, warn a group of educators in the Journal of the National Educational Association. The teacher who thinks of most of her pupils as "just average children" will deprive them of the individual recognition which each child needs, while conversely, the more closely any "average child" is studied, the more clearly he will be seen to be uniquely himself. A psychologist might add that the same rule applies to adults and that the key to success in dealing with your neighboors is to refuse to "lump them all together" but see each one as an individual with his or her own special needs and interests.

Is "guessing" unscientific?

Answer: Not if you know you are guessing and don't treat your guesses as facts until you have verified them. Most established scientific principles — the relation between germs and disease, for example—were originally guesses or hypotheses which experiments eventually proved to be true. Depth psychology or psychoanalysis has bee ncriticized as being "mostly guesswork," because you cannot know positively in advance what is in anyone's unconscious mind. But the well-trained analyst will "guess right" most of the time, and will check his guesses by the patient's response before taking them as final.

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11—(INS)—Gloria Swanson heads straight back to Hollywood to make another picture for Ed Alperson and Milton Bren as soon as "Nina" closes on Broadway. Yes, she's going to remain in the role until the play closes.

Gloria Swanson

"I am going to stick to the ship," said Gloria via long distance from New York. In spite of bad reviews, "Nina" is sold out for seven weeks with an advance sale of $120,000, mostly because of Gloria's name.

"I am sure those who invested in the show will get their money back," she said, "it isn't a costly production because there are only two other actors in the cast beside David Niven and myself."

I think Gloria will be glad to see Hollywood again. She was very happy making "Three For Bedroom" for Alperson and Bren last fall.

Her daughter, Michele Farmer, will married Saturday at the Little Church Around the Corner to Robert Amon.

Roy Rogers, who just won a four-year battle to keep Republic from selling his old films to TV, now goes "live" on TV himself—which is what everyone expected including his old bosses.

However, this won't be Roy's own show. He'll "guest spot" with his wife, Dale Evans, his hoss, Trigger, plus Carmen Miranda, Alan Young and Jack Paar, and get experience in the new medium before springing his own act.

While Roy's row with Republic was going on he was restrained from personally appearing on TV.

The future fate of show business may hinge on this legal decision, wherein studios cannot issue old films for commercial TV without the consent of the star—and a cash payment.

Chit-chat:

Young Peter Howard, son of Mrs. George Vanderbilt, and Betsy Von Furstenberg's most ardent admirer, telephoned me from New York.

"I haven't given up hope of marrying Betsy," he told me. "I don't believe she's ever marry Nick Hilton. She's coming to New York on the sixth of January to go into the stage play 'Dear Barbarian,' and I am going to be right here.

"I am studying for the stage with Vicky Cummings and I had a test made in Italy by Leonid Moguy," said the undaunted Peter. I believe that Betsy and I were made for each other. I have known her always and I am not going to give her up."

I'm beginning to think that Jane Wyman wasn't fooling when she said "I'm the kind of girl who can fall into a mud trap and come up with a gold mine."

Jane, who will undoubtedly be nominated for "Blue Veil" when Academy time rolls around, also is headed for stardom in another field.

Her Decca records, made with Bing Crosby and Groucho Marx, are doing a land office business. Her newest, "It Was Nice While The Money Rolled In," is so much in the groove that officials of that company are trying to get her to sign an exclusive recording contract that will pay off in six figures.

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

"... Is merely telling little Ivan facts of life ... is telling him is no Santa Claus ... is only glorious leader! ..."

ON THE LINE

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK.—(INS)—A lot of people in this country don't drink. Matter of fact they're inclined to get sore at a writer who pens something about booze, even booze in moderation. Prohibition forces have never been stronger in recent years, and they view with pride the number of U. S. counties where a thirsty soul in search of some panther must seek out a 'legger.

But for those who do take a nourishing nip now and then, to shut out the fog, and who believe that drinking is more than getting drunk, my friend Ted Saucier has compiled as handsome a book as has come off the presses of Greystone Press or any other publisher this year. He calls it "Bottoms Up."

It contains 780 drink recipes, drawn from many lands and countless saloons of the plushier sort; the toasts of 38 countries, a distinguished glossary of bar terms which happily does not include "dividend?", a guide to proper glassware, a chapter on the correct wines to serve with food—by the Waldorf's elegant Philippe—and some post-graduate "Esquire" art from Bradshaw Crandell, Al Dorne, James Montgomery Flag, Gilbert Bundy, Russell Patterson, Arthur William Brown, Robert Bushnell, Earl Cordrey, John Falter, Phil Dormont, John La Gatta, Ben Stahl and other famed illustrators.

Some of my finest relatives around Washington, D. C., were bootleggers during Mr. Hoover's noble experiment. In fact the first pair of long pants I wore were paid for by an in-law in this nefarious profession. I must say in defense of him, however, that he always scrubbed the bathtub with Sano before mixing his gin and, with rather good taste, never included any books about the Borgias in his library.

None of these relatives, I'm afraid, would have approved of some of the drinks which Mr. Saucier has included in his book, the last word in such matters. My folks were fundamentalists when it came to preparing or drinking whisky. I'm sure they would have frowned heavily on either of the "atomic" cocktails listed in the book.

One of these is from Arnaud's, a delightful place in New Orleans. It says: One-third gin, one-third bonded bourbon, one-third Italian vermouth, dash of bitters, ice. Shake and serve in cocktail glass.

The other bomb comes from the Robert Treat Hotel in Newark, N. J. To the probable bewilderment of the Russians, who have been making A-bombs out of the material supplied them by cleverly placed spies. It goes:

Two parts gin, one part benedictine, two dashes of Curacao (Cointreau, Triple Sec or Grand Marnier may be substituted), ice. And, as usual, shake well and strain into cocktail glass.

My folks thought more simply, and there is perhaps a reflection of their straight-forwardness, inelegant as it was, in a recipe of mine which appears in "Bottoms Up." Get out your pencils because this is pretty difficult to remember:

Scotch, two lumps ice, twist lemon peel. Take large old-fashioned glass and drop ice into it. With the free hand, lift nearest bottle old Scotch and pour in double jolt. Over this intricate mixture please twist bit of lemon peel. Drink.

This, I'm afraid will offend the purists. It would certainly have offended Irvin S. Cobb whose julep is served at the hotel that bears his name in Paducah, Ky. He wrote, for instance, "Take from the cold spring, some water, pure as the angels are; mix it with sugar until it seems an oil. Then take a glass and crush your mint in it with a spoon—crush it around the border of the glass and leave no place untouched. Then throw the mint away—it is a sacrifice."

This goes on and on, but concludes, "and that, my friend, is one ——— of a fine mint julep."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

IF STRENGTH IS EVEN

PLAYERS who don't like to have either side playing at a very low contract, such as 1-No Trump or two in a suit, probably base their attitude mainly on the fact that not many points are at stake. What they probably don't realize is that high contracts are usually dependent at least partly on one side having a goodly majority of the high card strength, whereas low ones generally come when the strength is about evenly divided. In other words, there is likely to be a very close battle then, in which the slightest slip by either pair can decide the outcome.

	♠ Q 10 6 5 ♥ 10 6 5 ♦ K 8 5 ♣ 8 6 4
♠ A 8 7 ♥ A ♦ Q 10 9 6 4 ♣ 9 7 5 2	N W E S	♠ K 9 2 ♥ K 9 8 7 4 ♦ J 2 ♣ Q J 3
	♠ J 4 3 ♥ Q J 3 2 ♦ A 7 3 ♣ A K 10

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl.

West did right to pass his partner's borderline double, even though it could have been made on a rather mediocre holding in order to keep the bidding from closing. With his five-card diamond suit and a couple of sure side entries, the prospects were for at least as good a score against the doubled 1-No Trump as could be made in any contract by his own side.

That low contract should have been beaten a trick, but wasn't. Both defenders were at fault for failure to set it.

West's correct diamond 10 lead was won by the A and South sent the spade J through to the K. East returned the diamond J, on which West played low. Having no more diamonds, East switched to the club Q, the K winning and the spade 4 being led to the Q. The 10 of that suit was won by the A and West then established his diamonds by leading the 6 to the K. But he set up his suit too late. The spade 6 made South's fifth trick and the club 10 finesse followed by the A made seven to give him his contract.

The post mortem brought out clearly that West should have overtaken East's diamond J at the third trick, following which another diamond would have removed a dummy entry while establishing West's suit. That would have kept South from scoring the thirteenth spade and would have assured the defenders three tricks in diamonds plus enough others to beat the contract. East could have made it easier by playing the J on the first trick, the diamond 10 lead showing West had the 9 and either the Q or A, since both the K and 8 were in sight.

ON THE LINE

NEW YORK.—(INS)—A lot of people in this country don't drink. Matter of fact they're inclined to get sore at a writer who pens something about booze, even booze in moderation. Prohibition forces have never been stronger in recent years, and they view with pride the number of U. S. counties where a thirsty soul in search of some panther must seek out a 'legger.

But for those who do take a nourishing nip now and then, to shut out the fog, and who believe that drinking is more than getting drunk, my friend Ted Saucier has compiled as handsome a book as has come off the presses of Greystone Press or any other publisher this year. He calls it "Bottoms Up."

It contains 780 drink recipes, drawn from many lands and countless saloons of the plushier sort; the toasts of 38 countries, a distinguished glossary of bar terms which happily does not include "dividend?", a guide to proper glassware, a chapter on the correct wines to serve with food—by the Waldorf's elegant Philippe—and some post-graduate "Esquire" art from Bradshaw Crandell, Al Dorne, James Montgomery Flag, Gilbert Bundy, Russell Patterson, Arthur William Brown, Robert Bushnell, Earl Cordrey, John Falter, Phil Dormont, John La Gatta, Ben Stahl and other famed illustrators.

• — • — •

Some of my finest relatives around Washington, D. C., were bootleggers during Mr. Hoover's noble experiment. In fact the first pair of long pants I wore were paid for by an in-law in this nefarious profession. I must say in defense of him, however, that he always scrubbed the bathtub with Sano before mixing his gin and, with rather good taste, never included any books about the Borgias in his library.

None of these relatives, I'm afraid, would have approved of some of the drinks which Mr. Saucier has included in his book, the last word in such matters. My folks were fundamentalists when it came to preparing or drinking whisky. I'm sure they would have frowned heavily on either of the "atomic" cocktails listed in the book.

One of these is from Arnaud's, a delightful place in New Orleans. It says: One-third gin, one-third bonded bourbon, one-third Italian vermouth, dash of bitters, ice. Shake and serve in cocktail glass.

The other bomb comes from the Robert Treat Hotel in Newark, N. J. To the probable bewilderment of the Russians, who have been making A-bombs out of the material supplied them by cleverly placed spies. It goes:

Two parts gin, one part benedictine, two dashes of Curacao (Cointreau, Triple Sec or Grand Marnier may be substituted), ice. And, as usual, shake well and strain into cocktail glass.

• — • — •

My folks thought more simply, and there is perhaps a reflection of their straight-forwardness, inelegant as it was, in a recipe of mine which appears in "Bottoms Up." Get out your pencils because this is pretty difficult to remember:

Scotch, two lumps ice, twist lemon peel. Take large old-fashioned glass and drop ice into it. With the free hand, lift nearest bottle old Scotch and pour in double jolt. Over this intricate mixture please twist bit of lemon peel. Drink.

This, I'm afraid will offend the purists. It would certainly have offended Irvin S. Cobb whose julep is served at the hotel that bears his name in Paducah, Ky. He wrote, for instance, "Take from the cold spring, some water, pure as the angels are; mix it with sugar until it seems an oil. Then take a glass and crush your mint in it with a spoon—crush it around the border of the glass and leave no place untouched. Then throw the mint away—it is a sacrifice."

This goes on and on, but concludes, "and that, my friend, is one —— of a fine mint julep."

SUSIE Q. SMITH By Linda and Jerry Walter

"He's man's best friend, isn't he ... Well, maybe he'll lead us to one!"

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

IF STRENGTH IS EVEN

PLAYERS who don't like to have either side playing at a very low contract, such as 1-No Trump or two in a suit, probably base their attitude mainly on the fact that not many points are at stake. What they probably don't realize is that high contracts are usually dependent at least partly on one side having a goodly majority of the high card strength, whereas low ones generally come when the strength is about evenly divided. In other words, there is likely to be a very close battle then, in which the slightest slip by either pair can decide the outcome.

	♠ Q 10 6 5 ♥ 10 6 5 ♦ K 8 5 ♣ 8 6 4
♠ A 8 7 ♥ A ♦ Q 10 9 6 4 ♣ 9 7 5 2	N W E S	♠ K 9 2 ♥ K 9 8 7 4 ♦ J 2 ♣ Q J 3
	♠ J 4 3 ♥ Q J 3 2 ♦ A 7 3 ♣ A K 10

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl.

West did right to pass his partner's borderline double, even though it could have been made on a rather mediocre holding in order to keep the bidding from closing. With his five-card diamond suit and a couple of sure side entries, the prospects were for at least as good a score against the doubled 1-No Trump as could be made in any contract by his own side.

That low contract should have been beaten a trick, but wasn't. Both defenders were at fault for failure to set it.

West's correct diamond 10 lead was won by the A and South sent the spade J through to the K. East returned the diamond J, on which West played low. Having no more diamonds, East switched to the club Q, the K winning and the spade 4 being led to the Q. The 10 of that suit was won by the A and West then established his diamonds by leading the 6 to the K. But he set up his suit too late. The spade 6 made South's fifth trick and the club 10 finesse followed by the A made seven to give him his contract.

The post mortem brought out clearly that West should have overtaken East's diamond J at the third trick, following which another diamond would have removed a dummy entry while establishing West's suit. That would have kept South from scoring the thirteenth spade and would have assured the defenders three tricks in diamonds plus enough others to beat the contract. East could have made it easier by playing the J on the first trick, the diamond 10 lead showing West had the 9 and either the Q or A, since both the K and 8 were in sight.

Tomorrow's Problem

	♠ A Q 7 2 ♥ 7 3 ♦ K 7 6 2 ♣ K J 6
♠ None ♥ A K 10 8 6 5 ♦ J 3 ♣ A Q 9 5 4	N W E S	♠ None ♥ Q J 9 4 2 ♦ Q 10 9 8 5 4 ♣ 7 3
	♠ K J 10 9 8 6 5 4 3 ♥ None ♦ A ♣ 10 8 2

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

On this freakish rubber bridge deal, what would you consider the soundest bidding?

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

FRANK LEAHY'S "pore little boys" at Notre Dame finished their 1951 grid season in better shape than did his 1950 eleven but still not in the style Frank is accustomed to.

Where the Irish generally go all the way, the 1951 edition won seven games, lost two and was tied once. Quite an improvement over the 1950 team, which was beaten four times and tied once.

The word is out, of course, that the Irish will be really tough the next two seasons, because the nucleus of the good 1951 team was made up of sophomores and freshmen who should improve next year and the year after.

The Irish, however, will be facing some rough foes again next year, including Oklahoma and Texas, and it isn't that easy.

• • • •

OPTIMISM runs high because of the brilliant work this season of Sophomores Neil Worden, Johnny Lattner and Freshmen Paul Reynolds and Ralph Guglielmi, who came on despite their inexperience and replaced veteran starters.

The starting lineup in the Irish final game of the season, against Southern California, had six sophs and juniors and, after the first quarter, the team was directed by 18-year-old Guglielmi, who was leading the Grand View High school team of Columbus, O., a year ago.

The play of Guglielmi, who showed remarkable poise in such a big game and completed eight of 13 passes for 161 yards, had coast observers talking and using adjectives.

Adding to the optimistic note for the future was the play of Worden at full and Lattner at halfback. Lattner, who played on both offense and defense, had one of his best days. And Worden, the leading scorer on the team, gained 91 yards in rushes.

As an example of the class Leahy has coming up in his backfield next year (barring calls from the service) the three top rushers on the 1951 Notre Dame squad were Worden, Reynolds and Lattner. Two sophs and a freshman.

• • • •

FOOTBALL games aren't won only by backs, however.

It's the line that plays a major part and Leahy is losing some pretty fair football players here. Tackle Bob Toneff, Ends Jim Mutscheller and Chet Ostrowski and Paul Burns, guard, are graduating. Toneff was one of the standouts in the midwest for two years and so was Burns until he was injured this season.

All in all, however, the Irish should present a formidable team in the next two seasons.

And Leahy should be happy, even though he'll tell one and all that "We'll be lucky if we win more than we lose."

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

FRANK LEAHY'S "pore little boys" at Notre Dame finished their 1951 grid season in better shape than did his 1950 eleven but still not in the style Frank is accustomed to.

Where the Irish generally go all the way, the 1951 edition won seven games, lost two and was tied once. Quite an improvement over the 1950 team, which was beaten four times and tied once.

The word is out, of course, that the Irish will be really tough the next two seasons, because the nucleus of the good 1951 team was made up of sophomores and freshmen who should improve next year and the year after.

The Irish, however, will be facing some rough foes again next year, including Oklahoma and Texas, and it isn't that easy.

• • • •

OPTIMISM runs high because of the brilliant work this season of Sophomores Neil Worden, Johnny Lattner and Freshmen Paul Reynolds and Ralph Guglielmi, who came on despite their inexperience and replaced veteran starters.

The starting lineup in the Irish final game of the season, against Southern California, had six sophs and juniors and, after the first quarter, the team was directed by 18-year-old Guglielmi, who was leading the Grand View High school team of Columbus, O., a year ago.

The play of Guglielmi, who showed remarkable poise in such a big game and completed eight of 13 passes for 161 yards, had coast observers talking and using adjectives.

Adding to the optimistic note for the future was the play of Worden at full and Lattner at halfback. Lattner, who played on both offense and defense, had one of his best days. And Worden, the leading scorer on the team, gained 91 yards in rushes.

As an example of the class Leahy has coming up in his backfield next year (barring calls from the service) the three top rushers on the 1951 Notre Dame squad were Worden, Reynolds and Lattner. Two sophs and a freshman.

• • • •

FOOTBALL games aren't won only by backs, however.

It's the line that plays a major part and Leahy is losing some pretty fair football players here. Tackle Bob Toneff, Ends Jim Mutscheller and Chet Ostrowski and Paul Burns, guard, are graduating. Toneff was one of the standouts in the midwest for two years and so was Burns until he was injured this season.

All in all, however, the Irish should present a formidable team in the next two seasons.

And Leahy should be happy, even though he'll tell one and all that "We'll be lucky if we win more than we lose."

FRANK LEAHY'S "pore little boys" at Notre Dame finished their 1951 grid season in better shape than did his 1950 eleven but still not in the style Frank is accustomed to.

Where the Irish generally go all the way, the 1951 edition won seven games, lost two and was tied once. Quite an improvement over the 1950 team, which was beaten four times and tied once.

The word is out, of course, that the Irish will be really tough the next two seasons, because the nucleus of the good 1951 team was made up of sophomores and freshmen who should improve next year and the year after.

The Irish, however, will be facing some rough foes again next year, including Oklahoma and Texas, and it isn't that easy.

• • • •

OPTIMISM runs high because of the brilliant work this season of Sophomores Neil Worden, Johnny Lattner and Freshmen Paul Reynolds and Ralph Guglielmi, who came on despite their inexperience and replaced veteran starters.

The starting lineup in the Irish final game of the season, against Southern California, had six sophs and juniors and, after the first quarter, the team was directed by 18-year-old Guglielmi, who was leading the Grand View High school team of Columbus, O., a year ago.

The play of Guglielmi, who showed remarkable poise in such a big game and completed eight of 13 passes for 161 yards, had coast observers talking and using adjectives.

Adding to the optimistic note for the future was the play of Worden at full and Lattner at halfback. Lattner, who played on both offense and defense, had one of his best days. And Worden, the leading scorer on the team, gained 91 yards in rushes.

As an example of the class Leahy has coming up in his backfield next year (barring calls from the service) the three top rushers on the 1951 Notre Dame squad were Worden, Reynolds and Lattner. Two sophs and a freshman.

• • • •

FOOTBALL games aren't won only by backs, however.

It's the line that plays a major part and Leahy is losing some pretty fair football players here. Tackle Bob Toneff, Ends Jim Mutscheller and Chet Ostrowski and Paul Burns, guard, are graduating. Toneff was one of the standouts in the midwest for two years and so was Burns until he was injured this season.

All in all, however, the Irish should present a formidable team in the next two seasons.

And Leahy should be happy, even though he'll tell one and all that "We'll be lucky if we win more than we lose."

LaVale School Job Low Bid Is $43,295

Board Will Take Action Later

Three bids, ranging upward from $43,295, were received yesterday afternoon by the Allegany County Board of Education on the proposed three-room addition and other improvements to LaVale Elementary School.

George Construction Company submitted the low base bid of $43,295. Two other local contractors also bid. George F. Hazelwood Company submitted a base bid of $49,860 and John I. Vandegrift Company offered to do the work for $51,670.

No Completion Date

No completion date was given by George. However, Hazelwood agreed to complete the work in 180 days and Vandegrift in 240 days.

Each bidder turned in a breakdown on the construction costs. These included figures for excavating dirt, excavating rock, laying concrete, rough brickwork and face brickwork.

Assistant Superintendent of Schools Richard T. Rizer opened the bids in the absence of Superintendent Charles L. Kopp, who has been confined to his home by illness the past week.

Also present at the bid opening were Joseph T. Downey, supervisor of maintenance in the county schools; S. Russ Minter, architect, who drew up the plans for the job, and representatives for the bidding contractors.

Illness Delays

Because of Kopp's illness, the Board of Education did not meet yesterday to consider action on the bids. A special meeting will be called when the superintendent returns to his office.

The LaVale job is planned to alleviate crowded conditions that have persisted there for several years. Two classes have been held in the school auditorium during that period. The job also includes additional toilet facilities for the school.

Moore Heads Dairy Local

Jack F. Moore was reelected president and business agent of Local 924, Dairy Workers Union (AFL), at a regular business meeting recently in Allegany Trades Council Hall.

Other officers named for five year terms are James K. Carbaugh, vice president; Joseph F. Garlitz, secretary-business agent; and Aubra W. Beeghly, recording secretary.

P. A. Creighton was named three-year trustee, W. L. Ritchie, two-year trustee and Robert Lippold, one-year trustee.

Arden Haycock was appointed warden and Thomas Higson conductor for a one-year term.

The local union has a contract with six major dairies of the aera including Queen City, Farmers, Liberty, Mason, Barton and Dashiell.

The present contract expires February 1, 1952, and negotiations for a new contract will get underway in the near future. The union represents about 125 dairy workers including driver-salesmen and plant workers.

Carter To Head LaVale Firemen

L. B. Carter was elected president of the LaVale Volunteer Fire Department at a meeting last night at the Fire Hall.

Other officers for the coming year include: Joseph Connelly, vice-president; E. C. Kreissig, recording-secretary; William Dressman, financial - secretary; Walter Alexander, treasurer; Harry Klosterman, trustee and Edward Dressman, sergeant-at-arms.

Warren Livengood was named chief for the department and Herman Shank, assistant chief. Cromwell Zembower, past president of the department and present president of the Maryland Volunteer Firemen's Association, installed the officers. He withdrew his candidacy as president due to state duties.

A community Christmas tree will be sponsored by the fire department this year and installed near the Fire Hall. Bruce Long has been named chairman for arrangements. The next regular meeting of the company will be on the second Tuesday in January. A special meeting has been called for next Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. at the Fire Hall.

Jurors Receive $4,379 During October Term

Higher Pay Rate Figures In Total

Jurors who sat through 31 trials during the long October term of Allegany County Circuit Court, which finally came to an end last Friday, received payments totaling $4,379, according to records in the office of Joseph E. Boden, clerk of court.

The regular 25 petit jurors collected $4,289.20. In addition, special talesmen summoned off the streets of Cumberland to complete the jury panels for two murder trials received $90 more.

$141.26 Per Trial

Per trial jury cost amounted to $141.26. Heaviest payment was made to one juror who sat on 27 days of the term and was paid for 25 miles in driving to the Court House from his home. He received $229.50. Another man sat on juries 31 days but he received only $186 as he is a local man and had no mileage expenses.

During the October, 1950, term, petit jury costs ran to $1,297.50. However, there were only 10 jury trials during that term. Consequently, the per trial jury cost was $129.75.

Boden cautioned that the jury cost comparisons must be weighed in the light that the per day payments to jurors this term were heavier than during the corresponding term last year.

Rate Higher

In October, 1950, jurors were paid $5 per day of jury service and those living outside of Cumberland were paid 5 cents a mile traveling expenses on only one day of the term. Under an act of the Legislature last

Short Gap Youngsters Help Observe 1951 Firemen's Day

Some 35 children got one of the biggest thrills of their young lives recently when the Short Gap (W. Va.) Volunteer Fire Company observed Firemen's Recognition Day.

The kids got a ride on the big, shiny Short Gap fire truck, with the fire chief himself—Baker Brelsford—at the wheel.

Next year, firemen hope to give the children a ride on a newer, bigger truck.

A drive for funds to buy the new engine is now under way. The Ladies Auxiliary to the fire company holds suppers on the second Saturday of each month to help the fund.

Firemen hope to have the new vehicle in time for their homecoming celebration next August.

Only a little more than four years old, the company has taken the lead in several Short Gap civic enterprises, with the support of other citizens of the community.

In the last year, the company saw its street lighting program completed. Firemen hope to extend service in 1952.

The unit also has been active in the county Civil Defense program.

Justice Fast For Virginian

A 46-year-old Virginian yesterday found out that Allegany County justice can be swift.

John Thomas Stonebraker, of Mt. Williams, Va., was released from the County Jail here yesterday and headed back home, less than 48 hours after he was taken there by Sheriff Edward R. Muir. He had been picked up as a fugitive in Winchester, Va.

On Monday the Virginian was bound over to the January grand jury on a false pretense charge allegedly in obtaining coal from a Westernport man through issuance of a bad check.

Yesterday, three different actions in Allegany County Circuit Court cleared up the case. First, State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher filed a criminal information charging that Stonebraker was guilty of obtaining coal from a Westernport man June 1 by issuance of a bad check on a Gore, Va., bank.

Stonebraker, in turn, filed a petition for an immediate trial by court and waived indictment by the grand jury. Arraigned before Associate Judge Morgan C. Harris, the Frederick County, Va., man pleaded guilty as charged. Judge Harris then sentenced him to two years in the Maryland House of Correction and suspended sentence on condition that Stonebraker immediately make restitution of $46.25 through the State's Attorney's office. This was done and Stonebraker headed home.

Selections included "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Adeste Fidelis," "Jingle Bells," and "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear." Under the direction of Kenneth Shafer the band gave a 30 minute concert.

Donations were made to the Salvation Army Christmas Kettle.

Post Office Windows To Be Open Sunday

Post Office windows for the sale of stamps and for parcel post will be opened this Sunday from noon to 4 p. m., Thomas F. Conlon, postmaster, announced yesterday.

Conlon said the Sunday hours were an added service to the public. "It is hoped residents will take advantage of these added hours," Conlon stated, "because in this way strain from Monday's heavy mail will be lifted considerably."

Smoke Control In Terminal To Be Discussed

Haworth To Meet With Hitchcock

Smoke abatement measures in the Western Maryland Railway's terminal at Maryland Junction will be discussed here Thursday morning.

G. R. Haworth, vice president and general manager of the railway, and other Western Maryland officials will meet with George M. Hitchcock, city smoke abatement engineer, in the division offices here to discuss the subject.

The meeting was arranged by Joseph M. Miller, division superintendent, after details of the Tucker Smoke Report dealing with railroad terminals were discussed at a recent Cumberland Terminal meeting.

Since the shops are in nearby West Virginia, which has no smoke ordinance, control measures will be on a voluntary basis.

At a terminal meeting yesterday, records showed the Western Maryland turned in its best record ever for November, with only one partial and no bad violation in 19 observations. Five partials and one bad violation were noted in October.

Improvement was noted in the B. and O.'s November record, with 19 partials and four bad violations among 234 observations. In October, 22 partial and seven bad violations were noted.

Many of the B. and O. partials were on the ready track, generally during peak traffic periods, when as high as 18 locomotives were being tended by one fire watcher.

Hitchcock and Chester T. Williams, division superintendent, are to confer on the possibility of securing extra help during such peak periods in an effort to reduce the violations.

F. Perry Smith, newly appointed member of the Smoke Advisory Board, attended the meeting held at City Hall yesterday afternoon.

Bus Drivers Will Install

Local 1110, Bus Drivers Union (AFL), will install officers and make plans for 1952 contract negotiations at meetings planned today in Allegany Trades Council Hall.

The morning session will be held at 10:30 o'clock and the evening meeting at 7:30 o'clock.

Officers to be installed tonight by Paul L. Burley, vice president of the AFL Trades Council, are:

James H. Morrison, president; Lloyd W. Diehl, vice president; Lawrence L. Grim, business agent; Francis Schoenadel, recording secretary; Harvey May, shop steward, and Blaine Sheirer, warden.

Also to be discussed are plans for a new contract with the Cumberland Transit Lines. The present pact will expire February 29.

News In Brief

John S. Gridley, 213 Washington Street, employe of the Celanese Corporation of America and organist at First Presbyterian Church, was admitted to Allegany Hospital yesterday suffering from a knee injury sustained in a fall on his way to work.

R. Douglas Houck, son of Mrs. Raymond Houck, of Mt. Savage, and a student at Allegany High School, Cumberland, received a $25 bond and a citizenship reference book for participating in an American History contest at Baltimore Polytechnic Institute. He ws one among 13 state contestants.

Mrs. Ann I. Shaffer has been granted a permit by the building engineer to construct a two-story brick addition to the dwelling at 609 Ellwood Street at a cost of $2,000.

The Ridgedale Playground Association will meet today at 7:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Mona England, the president, at 879 Patterson Avenue.

A square dance class will be organized at a meeting in City Hall Auditorium Thursday at 7:30 p. m., Edmund F. Hoey, recreation director, announced yesterday.

State Police From Here Join Manhunt Near Baltimore

Authorities identified the man as George F. Ross, burglar and former convict wanted in Cleveland for the murder of a policeman Saturday. The West Coast hoodlum is also wanted in San Francisco and Seattle.

The four troopers, according to Lt. William E. O'Hara, commander of the LaVale barracks, joined eight State Police from Frederick and reported to Capt. Carl Dillinger, Troop A Commander at Waterloo.

The heavily-armed Maryland State Police began the widespread manhunt late Monday night. Since then planes and bloodhounds have been pressed into service. FBI agents are also streaming into the Baltimore area to join the search.

The hunt concentrated in the wild and wooded hills along U. S. 40 where the expressway crosses the Patapsco River north of Ellicott City and about six miles west of the Baltimore city limits.

A bloodstained handkerchief was reported found in a trench coat along Routes 40 and 105 in Howard County yesterday and identified as belonging to Ross.

The fugitive exchanged shots Monday night with two officers of Howard County who found him sleeping in a stolen Ohio car and it is believed Ross was wounded.

A filling station near the scene of the gunfire was also found burglarized yesterday morning and a first aid kit reported missing. The trench coat was reported to have been stolen and belonged to Jake Kirn, operator of the Chestnut Hill Service Center.

A full description of Ross has been sent out to Frederick and Cumberland patrols and the State Police have been alerted to be on the lookout for Ross.

Roadblocks have been set up on Route 40 and other roads in the Ellicott City area. Baltimore City police are stopping all cars at the city line.

Ross is known to have three revolvers and the gun that he used in the Cleveland killing. The stolen car he abandoned contained a shotgun, a deer rifle and 200 rounds of ammunition.

Tar Is Present In "Black Snow"

The report of an analysis of residue collected in South Cumberland following a heavy downfall of "black snow" in October was presented at a Cumberland Terminal Smoke meeting here yesterday.

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad officials said their chemists in Baltimore gave the following report on the residue furnished by George M. Hitchcock, smoke abatement engineer:

Tar, 7.2 per cent; carbon, 74 per cent and ash, 18.4 per cent.

A flood of complaints was received by the Smoke Abatement Office on October 24 after a black flaky material was found in several areas of South Cumberland. A similar heavy deposit like the first "black snow" was reported October 31.

Hitchcock said last month he believed the material was the residue of gas coal, saying it contained a considerable quantity of incompletely burned materials.

Weather

The cold temperatures of the weekend continued yesterday with a few snow flurries buzzing in the air about 9 p. m. The high temperature recorded yesterday at Constitution Park's weather station was 40 degrees, and the low was 24. At 8 p. m. the mercury was stopped at 35 degrees and moved neither up nor down until 11 p. m. The humidity at 6 o'clock last night was 60 per cent. The Weather Bureau predicts mostly cloudy and colder for today with snow flurries in the mountains. The Bureau says snow will hit this end of the state by Sunday.

SANTA READS LETTERS—Santa Claus and his helpers have begun the task of answering the thousands of letters received from children of Cumberland and the Tri-State area. Santa Claus can be seen reading over one of the letters dropped into the huge mailbox of the mammoth balloon parade held here recently. He has been carefully reading the many letters during the past two weeks and promises a reply to each one. Also pictured above is Anthony Saeli, manager of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce on Santa's left, and Robert Little Ebert, chairman of the Chamber's Mercantile Bureau.

Preparations For Christmas Celebrations Are Underway

Preparations for Christmas celebrations at Riverside Park and in South Cumberland are well underway.

Large trees to be used in tree lighting ceremonies are on hand at both spots and workers yesterday placed the tree at the South End Park at Race and Seymour Streets.

On hand at Riverside Park is a tree donated by J. Monroe Sharer, Bedford Road. It will replace a smaller tree installed there earlier this week.

The tree is a 26 foot Colorado silver pine and will be lighted during the night. Due to the beauty of the tree, the committee does not plan to try to add decorations which show up by day.

In the meanwhile, workers have completed a straw thatched shelter for the new outdoor nativity scene. Figures for the display have been received by Mrs. Marguerite Findlay, a member of the committee.

Some 150 smaller trees used to decorate the park have been secured.

But they have been steadily disappearing, Mrs. Findlay said, adding that a watchman will be placed at the park to halt further losses.

Mrs. Findlay said the committee will begin to decorate the South End tree and park as soon as possible.

Electricians are slated to begin installation of lights early next week.

City Hall will begin to take on a holiday atmosphere this week as Yule decorations appear.

The community celebration will be held at Riverside Park Sunday, December 23. The South End celebration will be in charge of the South Cumberland Businessmen's Association.

Civil Defense Speedup Asked By McIntosh

Need For Organization Stressed At Sessions

"The time has come to put meat on the bones of the Civil Defense structure and organize rescue teams and other necessary personnel in the event of emergency."

Tihs was the reminder given last night to approximately 50 representatives of local and county agencies of the CD program by Col. David G. McIntosh, III, head of a civil defense team from the state director's office at Pikesville.

Secor Gives Talk

The two-day training courses were held at the conference room of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company. Jay Secor in speaking to the group stressed the need for radiological education and training. Instruments similar to Geiger Counters are used to detect the presence of atomic radiation, Secor noted, and measures its intensity. The county is equipped with several of these instruments for training purposes.

Col. McIntosh discussed the role which will be played by public utilities and noted the operational plan used in large metropolitan areas and how the agencies would function in an emergency.

It was also explained how attack warnings would be handled, and Col. McIntosh said the warnings would be channeled through the Air Force throughout the states and counties. Specified centers where information would be telephoned in and the dissemination of the information was also explained.

Welfare Services Noted

L. W. Tipton, another member of the visiting team, spoke on the Emergency Welfare Services and said the setup will, be two-fold. The prime purpose of the services will be to care for the victims immediately after an attaek in the distressed area. Remote areas would be set up to care for the homeless, and provide clothing and food for those affected by the emergency.

The two day training session was summarized and each person in attendance given a copy of the lesson plan. Col. McIntosh urged representatives to organize other classes throughout the county and bring the lessons to other individuals.

Col. McIntosh was gratified at the turnout for the past classes and commeded William G. Barger, county director, for his enthusiasm and accomplishments in Allegany County.

State Budget Discussion Set Here Tonight

Sobeloff Group Schedules Series

Plans for a new-type state budget will be explained to interested Western Marylanders at a meeting of the Commission on Streamlining the Maryland Government at the Algonquin Hotel here at 6 o'clock this evening.

This is one of three meetings scheduled around the state this week. The first will be held at noon today at the Francis Scott Key Hotel in Frederick. The third will be Friday night in the Baltimore City Hall.

The commission, headed by Simon Sobeloff, has recommended a new form of budget which will show how much money a state agency will pay for a given activity. The present budget shows line-by-line how much money goes for each person on the payroll, or for services received, but it does not classify the items under the activities concerned.

The commission believes a program-type budget would give legislators a clearer picture of purposes for which state money will be spent. The series of meetings, similar to a group held on the Eastern Shore last week, has been planned to explain the commission's proposals to legislators and civic leaders.

Club Plans Yule Bird Counting

The fifth annual Christmas Bird Count of the Junior Bird Club was announced last night at a meeting of the group in Central YMCA.

Each year the local bird club joins other clubs all over the United States counting birds in different areas which are mapped out for individual groups of the club.

According to Mrs. Gilbert Miller, adult advisor for the group, the local bird club counts approximately 5,000 birds in this area and list about 50 different species each year.

This year the club has scheduled Saturday, December 22, for its bird census.

Listed in charge of the different areas are Neal Smith, George Windish, Larry Cessna, Richard Johnson, Mariano Gonzalez, Charles Baker, Robert Hardman and Robert Miller.

Also at last night's meeting, the club's next Audubon Screen Tour was set for January 15, 1952 at Allegany Hospital. The film will be entitled, "America the Beautiful" accompanied with a return appearance of Tom and Arlene Hadley, lecturers.

At the meeting, the program for the rest of the school year ending in June, was presented, and bird observations were given by members. In charge of the meeting was Neal Smith, president.

Also present was Mrs. T. M. Andrews, adult advisor for the club.

Seal Sale Nears Halfway Mark

The Christmas Seal Sale is nearing the halfway mark, Glenn Davis, chairman of the 1951 campaign, announced yesterday.

With the closing of the campaign's third week, a total of $6,988.64 has been received at the Allegany County Tuberculosis Association office in the Union Street County Building.

This is 47 per cent of the $15,000 goal set by the association to fight "white death" in Allegany County, Davis stated.

Davis reported that $5,681.10 was received from Cumberland residents, $794.55 from Frostburg and $513 from Westernport.

To spur contributions from those who have not sent in returns, Miss Jean Reinhard, executive secretary of the association, said reminder notes are being mailed.

She pointed out that some contributors who have already made donations may receive these reminders, as invariably minor office mistakes will be made.

Those who have contributed and receive a reminder should disregard it, she added.

The association began its 1951 seal sale November 19 with the mailing of 18,644 letters to county residents. The sale will continue until December 25.

Funds received from this year's seal sale will be used to support the 1952 Tuberculosis Prevention and Control Program.

State Drive To Aid Victims Of Arthritis Now Underway

Persons suffering from arthritis in this country represent a burden of $1,070,000,000 annually to themselves and those who help them.

This gigantic bill was revealed by Clarence W. Miles, president of the Maryland Chapter of the National Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation. Miles is presently engaged in exerting efforts to secure funds from persons all over the state in the annual drive for aid to combat arthritis and rheumatism.

"That huge figure includes $840,000,000 lost annually in wages by victims so incapacitated that they represent the equivalent of 320,000 persons unable to work," Miles said.

"Another $130,000,000 is spent each year by taxpayers to provide relief for the disabled workers. The third figure in the item comes to the $100,000,000 spent personally and institutionally for medical care for the victims.

"When we are assured by medical authorities that about 70 per cent of these patients can be returned to useful and active living, if given the benefit of present methods of therapy, Marylanders can realize what a successful arthritis and rheumatism campaign can mean to the many thousands of afflicted in this state."

The Maryland Chapter is seeking but $50,000, of which $30,000 is to be raised in Baltimore. This money will be put to work on behalf of the arthritic and rheumatic clinics to be set up in the counties.

At present, the only two clinic facilities are in Baltimore, at Johns Hopkins Hospital and the University of Maryland Hospital.

LaVale School Job Low Bid Is $43,295

Board Will Take Action Later

Three bids, ranging upward from $43,295, were received yesterday afternoon by the Allegany County Board of Education on the proposed three-room addition and other improvements to LaVale Elementary School.

George Construction Company submitted the low base bid of $43,295. Two other local contractors also bid. George F. Hazelwood Company submitted a base bid of $49,860 and John I. Vandegrift Company offered to do the work for $51,670.

No Completion Date

No completion date was given by George. However, Hazelwood agreed to complete the work in 180 days and Vandegrift in 240 days.

Each bidder turned in a breakdown on the construction costs. These included figures for excavating dirt, excavating rock, laying concrete, rough brickwork and face brickwork.

Assistant Superintendent of Schools Richard T. Rizer opened the bids in the absence of Superintendent Charles L. Kopp, who has been confined to his home by illness the past week.

Also present at the bid opening were Joseph T. Downey, supervisor of maintenance in the county schools; S. Russ Minter, architect, who drew up the plans for the job, and representatives for the bidding contractors.

Illness Delays

Because of Kopp's illness, the Board of Education did not meet yesterday to consider action on the bids. A special meeting will be called when the superintendent returns to his office.

The LaVale job is planned to alleviate crowded conditions that have persisted there for several years. Two classes have been held in the school auditorium during that period. The job also includes additional toilet facilities for the school.

Moore Heads Dairy Local

Jack F. Moore was reelected president and business agent of Local 924, Dairy Workers Union (AFL), at a regular business meeting recently in Allegany Trades Council Hall.

Other officers named for five year terms are James K. Carbaugh, vice president; Joseph F. Garlitz, secretary-business agent; and Aubra W. Beeghly, recording secretary.

P. A. Creighton was named three-year trustee, W. L. Ritchie, two-year trustee and Robert Lippold, one-year trustee.

Arden Haycock was appointed warden and Thomas Higson conductor for a one-year term.

The local union has a contract with six major dairies of the aera including Queen City, Farmers, Liberty, Mason, Barton and Dashiell.

The present contract expires February 1, 1952, and negotiations for a new contract will get underway in the near future. The union represents about 125 dairy workers including driver-salesmen and plant workers.

Carter To Head LaVale Firemen

L. B. Carter was elected president of the LaVale Volunteer Fire Department at a meeting last night at the Fire Hall.

Other officers for the coming year include: Joseph Connelly, vice-president; E. C. Kreissig, recording-secretary; William Dressman, financial - secretary; Walter Alexander, treasurer; Harry Klosterman, trustee and Edward Dressman, sergeant-at-arms.

Warren Livengood was named chief for the department and Herman Shank, assistant chief. Cromwell Zembower, past president of the department and present president of the Maryland Volunteer Firemen's Association, installed the officers. He withdrew his candidacy as president due to state duties.

A community Christmas tree will be sponsored by the fire department this year and installed near the Fire Hall. Bruce Long has been named chairman for arrangements. The next regular meeting of the company will be on the second Tuesday in January. A special meeting has been called for next Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. at the Fire Hall.

Higher Pay Rate Figures In Total

Jurors who sat through 31 trials during the long October term of Allegany County Circuit Court, which finally came to an end last Friday, received payments totaling $4,379, according to records in the office of Joseph E. Boden, clerk of court.

The regular 25 petit jurors collected $4,289.20. In addition, special talesmen summoned off the streets of Cumberland to complete the jury panels for two murder trials received $90 more.

$141.26 Per Trial

Per trial jury cost amounted to $141.26. Heaviest payment was made to one juror who sat on 27 days of the term and was paid for 25 miles in driving to the Court House from his home. He received $229.50. Another man sat on juries 31 days but he received only $186 as he is a local man and had no mileage expenses.

During the October, 1950, term, petit jury costs ran to $1,297.50. However, there were only 10 jury trials during that term. Consequently, the per trial jury cost was $129.75.

Boden cautioned that the jury cost comparisons must be weighed in the light that the per day payments to jurors this term were heavier than during the corresponding term last year.

Rate Higher

In October, 1950, jurors were paid $5 per day of jury service and those living outside of Cumberland were paid 5 cents a mile traveling expenses on only one day of the term. Under an act of the Legislature last

Short Gap Youngsters Help Observe 1951 Firemen's Day

Some 35 children got one of the biggest thrills of their young lives recently when the Short Gap (W. Va.) Volunteer Fire Company observed Firemen's Recognition Day.

The kids got a ride on the big, shiny Short Gap fire truck, with the fire chief himself—Baker Brelsford—at the wheel.

It was an unusually warm day, so the kids put on their polo shirts and blue jeans and clambered aboard for a ride around town.

Next year, firemen hope to give the children a ride on a newer, bigger truck.

A drive for funds to buy the new engine is now under way. The Ladies Auxiliary to the fire company holds suppers on the second Saturday of each month to help the fund.

Firemen hope to have the new vehicle in time for their homecoming celebration next August.

Only a little more than four years old, the company has taken the lead in several Short Gap civic enterprises, with the support of other citizens of the community.

In the last year, the company saw its street lighting program completed. Firemen hope to extend service in 1952.

The unit also has been active in the county Civil Defense program.

Shrine Band Gives Concert

The Ali Ghan Shrine Band, with visiting Shriners from Lonaconing and Oakland, played a surprise concert for Christmas shoppers last evening.

The group went from the Ali Ghan City Club to Baltimore Street, in front of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, and played Christmas music for the benefit of shoppers.

Selections included "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Adeste Fidelis," "Jingle Bells," and "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear." Under the direction of Kenneth Shafer the band gave a 30 minute concert.

Donations were made to the Salvation Army Christmas Kettle.

Post Office Windows To Be Open Sunday

Post Office windows for the sale of stamps and for parcel post will be opened this Sunday from noon to 4 p. m., Thomas F. Conlon, postmaster, announced yesterday.

Conlon said the Sunday hours were an added service to the public. "It is hoped residents will take advantage of these added hours," Conlon stated, "because in this way strain from Monday's heavy mail will be lifted considerably."

Justice Fast For Virginian

A 46-year-old Virginian yesterday found out that Allegany County justice can be swift.

John Thomas Stonebraker, of Mt. Williams, Va., was released from the County Jail here yesterday and headed back home, less than 48 hours after he was taken there by Sheriff Edward R. Muir. He had been picked up as a fugitive in Winchester, Va.

On Monday the Virginian was bound over to the January grand jury on a false pretense charge allegedly in obtaining coal from a Westernport man through issuance of a bad check.

Yesterday, three different actions in Allegany County Circuit Court cleared up the case. First, State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher filed a criminal information charging that Stonebraker was guilty of obtaining coal from a Westernport man June 1 by issuance of a bad check on a Gore, Va., bank.

Stonebraker, in turn, filed a petition for an immediate trial by court and waived indictment by the grand jury. Arraigned before Associate Judge Morgan C. Harris, the Frederick County, Va., man pleaded guilty as charged. Judge Harris then sentenced him to two years in the Maryland House of Correction and suspended sentence on condition that Stonebraker immediately make restitution of $46.25 through the State's Attorney's office. This was done and Stonebraker headed home.

Smoke Control In Terminal To Be Discussed

Haworth To Meet With Hitchcock

Smoke abatement measures in the Western Maryland Railway's terminal at Maryland Junction will be discussed here Thursday morning.

G. R. Haworth, vice president and general manager of the railway, and other Western Maryland officials will meet with George M. Hitchcock, city smoke abatement engineer, in the division offices here to discuss the subject.

The meeting was arranged by Joseph M. Miller, division superintendent, after details of the Tucker Smoke Report dealing with railroad terminals were discussed at a recent Cumberland Terminal meeting.

Since the shops are in nearby West Virginia, which has no smoke ordinance, control measures will be on a voluntary basis.

At a terminal meeting yesterday, records showed the Western Maryland turned in its best record ever for November, with only one partial and no bad violation in 19 observations. Five partials and one bad violation were noted in October.

Improvement was noted in the B. and O.'s November record, with 19 partials and four bad violations among 234 observations. In October, 22 partial and seven bad violations were noted.

Many of the B. and O. partials were on the ready track, generally during peak traffic periods, when as high as 18 locomotives were being tended by one fire watcher.

Hitchcock and Chester T. Williams, division superintendent, are to confer on the possibility of securing extra help during such peak periods in an effort to reduce the violations.

F. Perry Smith, newly appointed member of the Smoke Advisory Board, attended the meeting held at City Hall yesterday afternoon.

Bus Drivers Will Install

Local 1110, Bus Drivers Union (AFL), will install officers and make plans for 1952 contract negotiations at meetings planned today in Allegany Trades Council Hall.

The morning session will be held at 10:30 o'clock and the evening meeting at 7:30 o'clock.

Officers to be installed tonight by Paul L. Burley, vice president of the AFL Trades Council, are:

James H. Morrison, president; Lloyd W. Diehl, vice president; Lawrence L. Grim, business agent; Francis Schoenadel, recording secretary; Harvey May, shop steward, and Blaine Sheirer, warden.

Also to be discussed are plans for a new contract with the Cumberland Transit Lines. The present pact will expire February 29.

News In Brief

John S. Gridley, 213 Washington Street, employe of the Celanese Corporation of America and organist at First Presbyterian Church, was admitted to Allegany Hospital yesterday suffering from a knee injury sustained in a fall on his way to work.

R. Douglas Houck, son of Mrs. Raymond Houck, of Mt. Savage, and a student at Allegany High School, Cumberland, received a $25 bond and a citizenship reference book for participating in an American History contest at Baltimore Polytechnic Institute. He ws one among 13 state contestants.

Mrs. Ann I. Shaffer has been granted a permit by the building engineer to construct a two-story brick addition to the dwelling at 609 Ellwood Street at a cost of $2,000.

The Ridgedale Playground Association will meet today at 7:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Mona England, the president, at 879 Patterson Avenue.

A square dance class will be organized at a meeting in City Hall Auditorium Thursday at 7:30 p. m., Edmund F. Hoey, recreation director, announced yesterday.

State Police From Here Join Manhunt Near Baltimore

Authorities identified the man as George F. Ross, burglar and former convict wanted in Cleveland for the murder of a policeman Saturday. The West Coast hoodlum is also wanted in San Francisco and Seattle.

The four troopers, according to Lt. William E. O'Hara, commander of the LaVale barracks, joined eight State Police from Frederick and reported to Capt. Carl Dillinger, Troop A Commander at Waterloo.

The heavily-armed Maryland State Police began the widespread manhunt late Monday night. Since then planes and bloodhounds have been pressed into service. FBI agents are also streaming into the Baltimore area to join the search.

The hunt concentrated in the wild and wooded hills along U. S. 40 where the expressway crosses the Patapsco River north of Ellicott City and about six miles west of the Baltimore city limits.

A bloodstained handkerchief was reported found in a trench coat along Routes 40 and 105 in Howard County yesterday and identified as belonging to Ross.

The fugitive exchanged shots Monday night with two officers of Howard County who found him sleeping in a stolen Ohio car and it is believed Ross was wounded.

A filling station near the scene of the gunfire was also found burglarized yesterday morning and a first aid kit reported missing. The trench coat was reported to have been stolen and belonged to Jake Kirn, operator of the Chestnut Hill Service Center.

A full description of Ross has been sent out to Frederick and Cumberland patrols and the State Police have been alerted to be on the lookout for Ross.

Roadblocks have been set up on Route 40 and other roads in the Ellicott City area. Baltimore City police are stopping all cars at the city line.

Ross is known to have three revolvers and the gun that he used in the Cleveland killing. The stolen car he abandoned contained a shotgun, a deer rifle and 200 rounds of ammunition.

Tar Is Present In "Black Snow"

The report of an analysis of residue collected in South Cumberland following a heavy downfall of "black snow" in October was presented at a Cumberland Terminal Smoke meeting here yesterday.

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad officials said their chemists in Baltimore gave the following report on the residue furnished by George M. Hitchcock, smoke abatement engineer:

Tar, 7.2 per cent; carbon, 74 per cent and ash, 18.4 per cent.

A flood of complaints was received by the Smoke Abatement Office on October 24 after a black flaky material was found in several areas of South Cumberland. A similar heavy deposit like the first "black snow" was reported October 31.

Hitchcock said last month he believed the material was the residue of gas coal, saying it contained a considerable quantity of incompletely burned materials.

Weather

The cold temperatures of the weekend continued yesterday with a few snow flurries buzzing in the air about 9 p. m. The high temperature recorded yesterday at Constitution Park's weather station was 40 degrees, and the low was 24. At 8 p. m. the mercury was stopped at 35 degrees and moved neither up nor down until 11 p. m. The humidity at 6 o'clock last night was 60 per cent. The Weather Bureau predicts mostly cloudy and colder for today with snow flurries in the mountains. The Bureau says snow will hit this end of the state by Sunday.

SANTA READS LETTERS—Santa Claus and his helpers have begun the task of answering the thousands of letters received from children of Cumberland and the Tri-State area. Santa Claus can be seen reading over one of the letters dropped into the huge mailbox of the mammoth balloon parade held here recently. He has been carefully reading the many letters during the past two weeks and promises a reply to each one. Also pictured above is Anthony Saeli, manager of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce on Santa's left, and Robert Little Ebert, chairman of the Chamber's Mercantile Bureau.

Preparations For Christmas Celebrations Are Underway

Preparations for Christmas celebrations at Riverside Park and in South Cumberland are well underway.

Large trees to be used in tree lighting ceremonies are on hand at both spots and workers yesterday placed the tree at the South End Park at Race and Seymour Streets.

On hand at Riverside Park is a tree donated by J. Monroe Sharer, Bedford Road. It will replace a smaller tree installed there earlier this week.

The tree is a 26 foot Colorado silver pine and will be lighted during the night. Due to the beauty of the tree, the committee does not plan to try to add decorations which show up by day.

In the meanwhile, workers have completed a straw thatched shelter for the new outdoor nativity scene. Figures for the display have been received by Mrs. Marguerite Findlay, a member of the committee.

Some 150 smaller trees used to decorate the park have been secured.

But they have been steadily disappearing, Mrs. Findlay said, adding that a watchman will be placed at the park to halt further losses.

Mrs. Findlay said the committee will begin to decorate the South End tree and park as soon as possible.

Electricians are slated to begin installation of lights early next week.

City Hall will begin to take on a holiday atmosphere this week as Yule decorations appear.

The community celebration will be held at Riverside Park Sunday, December 23. The South End celebration will be in charge of the South Cumberland Businessmen's Association.

Each bidder turned in a breakdown on the construction costs. These included figures for excavating dirt, excavating rock, laying concrete, rough brickwork and face brickwork.

Assistant Superintendent of Schools Richard T. Rizer opened the bids in the absence of Superintendent Charles L. Kopp, who has been confined to his home by illness the past week.

Also present at the bid opening were Joseph T. Downey, supervisor of maintenance in the county schools; S. Russ Minter, architect, who drew up the plans for the job, and representatives for the bidding contractors.

Illness Delays

Because of Kopp's illness, the Board of Education did not meet yesterday to consider action on the bids. A special meeting will be called when the superintendent returns to his office.

The LaVale job is planned to alleviate crowded conditions that have persisted there for several years. Two classes have been held in the school auditorium during that period. The job also includes additional toilet facilities for the school.

Higher Pay Rate Figures In Total

Jurors who sat through 31 trials during the long October term of Allegany County Circuit Court, which finally came to an end last Friday, received payments totaling $4,379, according to records in the office of Joseph E. Boden, clerk of court.

The regular 25 petit jurors collected $4,289.20. In addition, special talesmen summoned off the streets of Cumberland to complete the jury panels for two murder trials received $90 more.

$141.26 Per Trial

Per trial jury cost amounted to $141.26. Heaviest payment was made to one juror who sat on 27 days of the term and was paid for 25 miles in driving to the Court House from his home. He received $229.50. Another man sat on juries 31 days but he received only $186 as he is a local man and had no mileage expenses.

During the October, 1950, term, petit jury costs ran to $1,297.50. However, there were only 10 jury trials during that term. Consequently, the per trial jury cost was $129.75.

Boden cautioned that the jury cost comparisons must be weighed in the light that the per day payments to jurors this term were heavier than during the corresponding term last year.

Rate Higher

In October, 1950, jurors were paid $5 per day of jury service and those living outside of Cumberland were paid 5 cents a mile traveling expenses on only one day of the term. Under an act of the Legislature last

Short Gap Youngsters Help Observe 1951 Firemen's Day

Some 35 children got one of the biggest thrills of their young lives recently when the Short Gap (W. Va.) Volunteer Fire Company observed Firemen's Recognition Day.

The kids got a ride on the big, shiny Short Gap fire truck, with the fire chief himself—Baker Brelsford—at the wheel.

It was an unusually warm day, so the kids put on their polo shirts and blue jeans and clambered aboard for a ride around town.

Next year, firemen hope to give the children a ride on a newer, bigger truck.

A drive for funds to buy the new engine is now under way. The Ladies Auxiliary to the fire company holds suppers on the second Saturday of each month to help the fund.

Firemen hope to have the new vehicle in time for their homecoming celebration next August.

Only a little more than four years old, the company has taken the lead in several Short Gap civic enterprises, with the support of other citizens of the community.

In the last year, the company saw its street lighting program completed. Firemen hope to extend service in 1952.

The unit also has been active in the county Civil Defense program.

Justice Fast For Virginian

A 46-year-old Virginian yesterday found out that Allegany County justice can be swift.

John Thomas Stonebraker, of Mt. Williams, Va., was released from the County Jail here yesterday and headed back home, less than 48 hours after he was taken there by Sheriff Edward R. Muir. He had been picked up as a fugitive in Winchester, Va.

On Monday the Virginian was bound over to the January grand jury on a false pretense charge allegedly in obtaining coal from a Westernport man through issuance of a bad check.

Yesterday, three different actions in Allegany County Circuit Court cleared up the case. First, State's Attorney Paul M. Fletcher filed a criminal information charging that Stonebraker was guilty of obtaining coal from a Westernport man June 1 by issuance of a bad check on a Gore, Va., bank.

Stonebraker, in turn, filed a petition for an immediate trial by court and waived indictment by the grand jury. Arraigned before Associate Judge Morgan C. Harris, the Frederick County, Va., man pleaded guilty as charged. Judge Harris then sentenced him to two years in the Maryland House of Correction and suspended sentence on condition that Stonebraker immediately make restitution of $46.25 through the State's Attorney's office. This was done and Stonebraker headed home.

Smoke Control In Terminal To Be Discussed

Haworth To Meet With Hitchcock

Smoke abatement measures in the Western Maryland Railway's terminal at Maryland Junction will be discussed here Thursday morning.

G. R. Haworth, vice president and general manager of the railway, and other Western Maryland officials will meet with George M. Hitchcock, city smoke abatement engineer, in the division offices here to discuss the subject.

The meeting was arranged by Joseph M. Miller, division superintendent, after details of the Tucker Smoke Report dealing with railroad terminals were discussed at a recent Cumberland Terminal meeting.

Since the shops are in nearby West Virginia, which has no smoke ordinance, control measures will be on a voluntary basis.

At a terminal meeting yesterday, records showed the Western Maryland turned in its best record ever for November, with only one partial and no bad violation in 19 observations. Five partials and one bad violation were noted in October.

Improvement was noted in the B. and O.'s November record, with 19 partials and four bad violations among 234 observations. In October, 22 partial and seven bad violations were noted.

Many of the B. and O. partials were on the ready track, generally during peak traffic periods, when as high as 18 locomotives were being tended by one fire watcher.

Hitchcock and Chester T. Williams, division superintendent, are to confer on the possibility of securing extra help during such peak periods in an effort to reduce the violations.

F. Perry Smith, newly appointed member of the Smoke Advisory Board, attended the meeting held at City Hall yesterday afternoon.

Bus Drivers Will Install

Local 1110, Bus Drivers Union (AFL), will install officers and make plans for 1952 contract negotiations at meetings planned today in Allegany Trades Council Hall.

The morning session will be held at 10:30 o'clock and the evening meeting at 7:30 o'clock.

Officers to be installed tonight by Paul L. Burley, vice president of the AFL Trades Council, are:

James H. Morrison, president; Lloyd W. Diehl, vice president; Lawrence L. Grim, business agent; Francis Schoenadel, recording secretary; Harvey May, shop steward, and Blaine Sheirer, warden.

Also to be discussed are plans for a new contract with the Cumberland Transit Lines. The present pact will expire February 29.

State Police From Here Join Manhunt Near Baltimore

Authorities identified the man as George F. Ross, burglar and former convict wanted in Cleveland for the murder of a policeman Saturday. The West Coast hoodlum is also wanted in San Francisco and Seattle.

The four troopers, according to Lt. William E. O'Hara, commander of the LaVale barracks, joined eight State Police from Frederick and reported to Capt. Carl Dillinger, Troop A Commander at Waterloo.

The heavily-armed Maryland State Police began the widespread manhunt late Monday night. Since then planes and bloodhounds have been pressed into service. FBI agents are also streaming into the Baltimore area to join the search.

The hunt concentrated in the wild and wooded hills along U. S. 40 where the expressway crosses the Patapsco River north of Ellicott City and about six miles west of the Baltimore city limits.

A bloodstained handkerchief was reported found in a trench coat along Routes 40 and 105 in Howard County yesterday and identified as belonging to Ross.

The fugitive exchanged shots Monday night with two officers of Howard County who found him sleeping in a stolen Ohio car and it is believed Ross was wounded.

A filling station near the scene of the gunfire was also found burglarized yesterday morning and a first aid kit reported missing. The trench coat was reported to have been stolen and belonged to Jake Kirn, operator of the Chestnut Hill Service Center.

A full description of Ross has been sent out to Frederick and Cumberland patrols and the State Police have been alerted to be on the lookout for Ross.

Roadblocks have been set up on Route 40 and other roads in the Ellicott City area. Baltimore City police are stopping all cars at the city line.

Ross is known to have three revolvers and the gun that he used in the Cleveland killing. The stolen car he abandoned contained a shotgun, a deer rifle and 200 rounds of ammunition.

Tar Is Present In "Black Snow"

The report of an analysis of residue collected in South Cumberland following a heavy downfall of "black snow" in October was presented at a Cumberland Terminal Smoke meeting here yesterday.

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad officials said their chemists in Baltimore gave the following report on the residue furnished by George M. Hitchcock, smoke abatement engineer:

Tar, 7.2 per cent; carbon, 74 per cent and ash, 18.4 per cent.

A flood of complaints was received by the Smoke Abatement Office on October 24 after a black flaky material was found in several areas of South Cumberland. A similar heavy deposit like the first "black snow" was reported October 31.

Hitchcock said last month he believed the material was the residue of gas coal, saying it contained a considerable quantity of incompletely burned materials.

The cold temperatures of the weekend continued yesterday with a few snow flurries buzzing in the air about 9 p. m. SANTA READS LETTERS—Santa Claus and his helpers have begun the task of answering the thousands of letters received from children of Cumberland and the Tri-State area. Santa Claus can be seen reading over one of the letters dropped into the huge mailbox of the mammoth balloon parade held here recently. He has been carefully reading the many letters during the past two weeks and promises a reply to each one. Also pictured above is Anthony Saeli, manager of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce on Santa's left, and Robert Little Ebert, chairman of the Chamber's Mercantile Bureau.

Preparations For Christmas Celebrations Are Underway

Preparations for Christmas celebrations at Riverside Park and in South Cumberland are well underway.

Large trees to be used in tree lighting ceremonies are on hand at both spots and workers yesterday placed the tree at the South End Park at Race and Seymour Streets.

On hand at Riverside Park is a tree donated by J. Monroe Sharer, Bedford Road. It will replace a smaller tree installed there earlier this week.

The tree is a 26 foot Colorado silver pine and will be lighted during the night. Due to the beauty of the tree, the committee does not plan to try to add decorations which show up by day.

In the meanwhile, workers have completed a straw thatched shelter for the new outdoor nativity scene. Figures for the display have been received by Mrs. Marguerite Findlay, a member of the committee.

Some 150 smaller trees used to decorate the park have been secured.

But they have been steadily disappearing, Mrs. Findlay said, adding that a watchman will be placed at the park to halt further losses.

Mrs. Findlay said the committee will begin to decorate the South End tree and park as soon as possible.

Electricians are slated to begin installation of lights early next week.

City Hall will begin to take on a holiday atmosphere this week as Yule decorations appear.

The community celebration will be held at Riverside Park Sunday, December 23. The South End celebration will be in charge of the South Cumberland Businessmen's Association.

State Budget Discussion Set Here Tonight

Sobeloff Group Schedules Series

Plans for a new-type state budget will be explained to interested Western Marylanders at a meeting of the Commission on Streamlining the Maryland Government at the Algonquin Hotel here at 6 o'clock this evening.

This is one of three meetings scheduled around the state this week. The first will be held at noon today at the Francis Scott Key Hotel in Frederick. The third will be Friday night in the Baltimore City Hall.

The commission, headed by Simon Sobeloff, has recommended a new form of budget which will show how much money a state agency will pay for a given activity. The present budget shows line-by-line how much money goes for each person on the payroll, or for services received, but it does not classify the items under the activities concerned.

The commission believes a program-type budget would give legislators a clearer picture of purposes for which state money will be spent. The series of meetings, similar to a group held on the Eastern Shore last week, has been planned to explain the commission's proposals to legislators and civic leaders.

Civil Defense Speedup Asked By McIntosh

Need For Organization Stressed At Sessions

"The time has come to put meat on the bones of the Civil Defense structure and organize rescue teams and other necessary personnel in the event of emergency."

Tihs was the reminder given last night to approximately 50 representatives of local and county agencies of the CD program by Col. David G. McIntosh, III, head of a civil defense team from the state director's office at Pikesville.

Secor Gives Talk

The two-day training courses were held at the conference room of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company. Jay Secor in speaking to the group stressed the need for radiological education and training. Instruments similar to Geiger Counters are used to detect the presence of atomic radiation, Secor noted, and measures its intensity. The county is equipped with several of these instruments for training purposes.

Col. McIntosh discussed the role which will be played by public utilities and noted the operational plan used in large metropolitan areas and how the agencies would function in an emergency.

It was also explained how attack warnings would be handled, and Col. McIntosh said the warnings would be channeled through the Air Force throughout the states and counties. Specified centers where information would be telephoned in and the dissemination of the information was also explained.

Welfare Services Noted

L. W. Tipton, another member of the visiting team, spoke on the Emergency Welfare Services and said the setup will, be two-fold. The prime purpose of the services will be to care for the victims immediately after an attaek in the distressed area. Remote areas would be set up to care for the homeless, and provide clothing and food for those affected by the emergency.

The two day training session was summarized and each person in attendance given a copy of the lesson plan. Col. McIntosh urged representatives to organize other classes throughout the county and bring the lessons to other individuals.

Col. McIntosh was gratified at the turnout for the past classes and commeded William G. Barger, county director, for his enthusiasm and accomplishments in Allegany County.

Club Plans Yule Bird Counting

The fifth annual Christmas Bird Count of the Junior Bird Club was announced last night at a meeting of the group in Central YMCA.

Each year the local bird club joins other clubs all over the United States counting birds in different areas which are mapped out for individual groups of the club.

According to Mrs. Gilbert Miller, adult advisor for the group, the local bird club counts approximately 5,000 birds in this area and list about 50 different species each year.

This year the club has scheduled Saturday, December 22, for its bird census.

Listed in charge of the different areas are Neal Smith, George Windish, Larry Cessna, Richard Johnson, Mariano Gonzalez, Charles Baker, Robert Hardman and Robert Miller.

Also at last night's meeting, the club's next Audubon Screen Tour was set for January 15, 1952 at Allegany Hospital. The film will be entitled, "America the Beautiful" accompanied with a return appearance of Tom and Arlene Hadley, lecturers.

At the meeting, the program for the rest of the school year ending in June, was presented, and bird observations were given by members. In charge of the meeting was Neal Smith, president.

Also present was Mrs. T. M. Andrews, adult advisor for the club.

Seal Sale Nears Halfway Mark

The Christmas Seal Sale is nearing the halfway mark, Glenn Davis, chairman of the 1951 campaign, announced yesterday.

With the closing of the campaign's third week, a total of $6,988.64 has been received at the Allegany County Tuberculosis Association office in the Union Street County Building.

This is 47 per cent of the $15,000 goal set by the association to fight "white death" in Allegany County, Davis stated.

Davis reported that $5,681.10 was received from Cumberland residents, $794.55 from Frostburg and $513 from Westernport.

To spur contributions from those who have not sent in returns, Miss Jean Reinhard, executive secretary of the association, said reminder notes are being mailed.

She pointed out that some contributors who have already made donations may receive these reminders, as invariably minor office mistakes will be made.

Those who have contributed and receive a reminder should disregard it, she added.

The association began its 1951 seal sale November 19 with the mailing of 18,644 letters to county residents. The sale will continue until December 25.

Funds received from this year's seal sale will be used to support the 1952 Tuberculosis Prevention and Control Program.

State Drive To Aid Victims Of Arthritis Now Underway

Persons suffering from arthritis in this country represent a burden of $1,070,000,000 annually to themselves and those who help them.

This gigantic bill was revealed by Clarence W. Miles, president of the Maryland Chapter of the National Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation. Miles is presently engaged in exerting efforts to secure funds from persons all over the state in the annual drive for aid to combat arthritis and rheumatism.

"That huge figure includes $840,000,000 lost annually in wages by victims so incapacitated that they represent the equivalent of 320,000 persons unable to work," Miles said.

"Another $130,000,000 is spent each year by taxpayers to provide relief for the disabled workers. The third figure in the item comes to the $100,000,000 spent personally and institutionally for medical care for the victims.

"When we are assured by medical authorities that about 70 per cent of these patients can be returned to useful and active living, if given the benefit of present methods of therapy, Marylanders can realize what a successful arthritis and rheumatism campaign can mean to the many thousands of afflicted in this state."

The Maryland Chapter is seeking but $50,000, of which $30,000 is to be raised in Baltimore. This money will be put to work on behalf of the arthritic and rheumatic clinics to be set up in the counties.

At present, the only two clinic facilities are in Baltimore, at Johns Hopkins Hospital and the University of Maryland Hospital.
